Holstein Annual Meeting Salutes Nichol, Promotes Raney

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

READING (Berks Co.) — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association (PHA) wrapped up its annual business meeting with a salute to its retiring executive director, declaring February 21 "Bill Nichol Day."

Nichol's honor was announced in a resolution unanimously adopted by the delegate and members attending the annual state Holstein meeting and convention, held February 20 - 22 at the Sheraton Inn.

Nichol, who headed the administrative business of PHA for nearly 38 years, officially retired on February 28. Ken Raney, longtime membership and public relations director for PHA who had been serving as the interim director since July, has been hired by the board as the new executive director, effective March 1.

In his annual report to the membership, PHA president Jay Houser, Spring Mills, recognized Nichols' contribution to the association during in his leadership tenure of nearly four decades.

"Bill's greatest accomplishment has been the purchase of the 125-acre farm at Middletown," Houser said. The Middletown farm is a nationally-recognized animal export facility, with close proximity to the Harrisburg International Airport, and has handled not only the exporting of thousands of head of cattle of many breeds, but other species of animals as well.

Houser opened his president's address by paying tribute to the Pennsylvania Holstein youth program accomplishments, noting the success of national-winning dairy bowl teams and nationally-honored junior members. Pennsylvania teams have won national dairy bowl titles five times since 1983.

The PHA youth scholarship fund has been granted tax-exempt status. Houser reported that over

Land O'Lakes OKs Merger

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — The members of Land O'Lakes Cooperative have recently approved a plan to merge with the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, according to a news release made this week by Land O'Lakes Inc., in Minneapolis, Minn.

The announcement this week of the merger approval by Land O'Lakes could very well signal the impending approach of yet another milepost by the ADC, which has traveled a lot of ground in the past 20 years, growing from mergers of regional cooperatives to being on the verge of possibly creating a national production/processing/marketing cooperative with even greater significance in the Middle Atlantic and elsewhere.

The announcement of the possibility of a merger between the two large cooperatives arose during the ADC annual meeting earlier this year, when it was announced that

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A summary of the Southeast Pennsylvania Grazing Conference at the Host Resort may have been stated when Jim Landis, a West Virginia dairyman, concluded his talk on "Farming in the 21st Century" with these words:

"Grazing pays now, and the Lord willing, it will continue to be the most efficient way of providing food known to man through the 21st century. You and your children and your grandchildren will enjoy the blessing of working with living things God gave us—soils, plants, and animals—if you grow grass and let the animals do the walking for you."

Landis believes you will find no more efficient way to convert the energy of the sun into usable human food than by using grass and animals. Because managed intensive grazing reduces input costs, cow stress and operator stress, milk produced from this method of farming offers returns per acre greater than most other crops.

Unlike many farmers who are considering dumping milk to get government attention, and stating operating costs more than $17 per hundred, Landis speaks of the "tremendous U.S. milk prices received in 1996. According to Landis, farmers in New Zealand are receiving only half as much for their milk, and in Argentina they are receiving only two-thirds as much.

On Landis' farm in Georgia they received a net average price of $15.32 per hunderded weight for 3.6 milk after hauling and marketing expenses were taken off. In 1995 their average net price was $12.51. On a cow producing 15,000 pounds of milk that is a $406 increase for 1996.

"We have a distinct price advantage at the present time and the difference is management," Landis said. "But price is only one thing to look at. I predict the price of milk will trend lower as the government moves away from subsidies. But the sooner the better.

"The public doesn't care if the poor farmer is put out of business. This happened in New Zealand 10 years ago. And now under the unregulated conditions, the consumer has many new dairy products to entice him to buy. It will be in the explosion of new consumer products that will drive the market and increase markets for dairy farmers after the government stops supporting the prices.

"We have been a victim of this tax called a check off where they use our money to advertise generic milk. Can you imagine what would happen if the cola companies had been advertising sweet water with a burp all these years, being taxed but not allowed to use their name. We have allowed the media to take our money and try to get people to believe and get us to believe that people enjoy drinking chalk water and kidney flush.

"Consumers have a right to have all kinds of milk and milk products to eat, advertised by the company selling their branded product. When this happens, the price to farmers will go down, but as grazers we can do it because the future lies in the kind of efficient production we have."

Landis also says pasture grazing increases herd health because it spreads the cattle out over rotating pastures. In addition, the cows spread their own manure, and the outdoors increases vigor in the animals.

Larson Sayre, beef farmer from Churchville, Maryland, looked at rotational grazing as a labor saving system. He said the cows laugh at us when we do all the work for them, carrying the feed into the barn and then back out to them.

In addition, the savings in planting and harvesting equipment will buy a lot of wire to divide the farm off into paddocks. Sayer had little sayings such as: "Make the livestock work for us, not us work for the livestock".

Speaking of grazing management, he said, "If you fail to plan, plan to fail."

And he said, the words "always" and "never" should not be used because change is the backbone of becoming a rotational grazer.

Other topics covered were soil management, seasonal dairying, and feeding, breeding, and calf-raising.

Delmarva Broiler

FEBRUARY 26, 1997

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained light and unaggressive. Seller offerings were adequate and in best balance on the 3 pound and lighter weights; Over 3 pound sizes were readily available and were generally slow in clearing. Live supplies were moderate to heavy; weights were mostly desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 56 to 70 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to weak. In the parts complex, supplies were irregularly balanced, but were more than sufficient for the light and cautious buying interest.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
FEBRUARY 26, 1997

Grain and soybean bids were lower at the close today as profit taking weakened bids. Wheat 5 to 7 cents lower. Corn steady to 2 cents lower. Sorghum steady to 1 cent lower. Soybeans 4 to 8 cents lower. Wheat bids continued to decline due to beneficial moisture falling in winter wheat areas. Very light export demand overnight was reported but not enough to strengthen bids. Good export sales overnight limited losses in corn bids as Taiwan purchased a substantial amount. China, however, continues to be competitive with the US as an exporter of corn, pushing US bids lower. Profit taking on the board pressured both corn and soybean bids after recent gains. Taiwan also bought a fair amount of soybeans overnight. .S. The Building you want. The Lease you need.

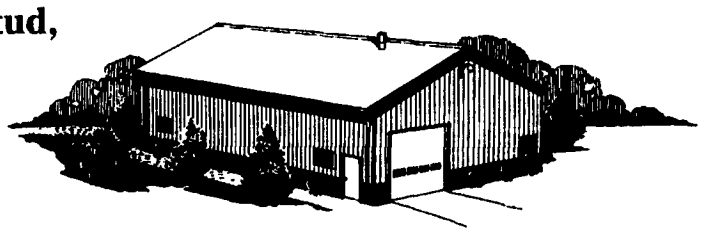
Whether your new farm or commercial building is of pole, timber column, stud, steel or block construction; choose Telmark lease financing.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider the features:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs may be as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules match your cash flow. Payment options include monthly, quarterly, annually, as well as, skip or specially designed seasonal payments.

How do you start leasing a building from Telmark? Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost. And call your Telmark representative:

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

MARCH 3-9, 1997

TOWN MEETING DAY, VT., MARCH 4.

BLOW ME OVER!

Lest you think the March wind is all bluster, keep in mind that a winter's wind can exert up to 25 percent more force during the denser air of winter's cold than at other times when the air is less dense. On the other hand, the chinook winds of the American Northwest and Canada have been known to raise temperatures as much as 30° F in just three minutes! One February in Calgary, Alberta, the temperatures climbed from -14° F to 76° F. Now that's a warm breeze! March is still early for most East Coast sailors, however, with average (and chilly) wind speeds of 13 miles per hour in Eastport, Maine, Atlantic City, New Jersey, and Key West, Florida.

The wind in one's face makes one wise.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Try nonfat evaporated milk for mashing potatoes, or use a lowfat cottage cheese.

FETA RISOTTO

4 cups vegetable broth
3 cups chopped broccoli
1 small onion, chopped
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1-1/2 cups Arborio rice juice of one lemon
1 cup crumbed feta cheese
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan

Bring the broth to a boil, add broccoli, and simmer until the broccoli is just tender. In a saucepan, sauté onions in olive oil, then add ginger and rice and stir to coat with oil. Stir one cup of broth from the broccoli into the rice until it is absorbed. Gradually add remainder of broth and broccoli, cooking until the rice is just done, about 15 minutes. Remove from heat, add lemon juice, feta, and Parmesan, and serve immediately.

Makes 4 servings, as a side dish.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

A veering wind will clear the sky. A backing wind says storms are nigh.

March wind kindles the adder and blooms the thorn.

When it thunders in March it brings sorrow.

The winds of the daytime wrestle and fight longer and stronger than those of the night.

Charolais Bulls

SIRE CALVES THAT TOP THE MARKET.

PROOF. Charolais-sired cattle fit within the guidelines of the National Beef Quality Audit. Feedlots expect and receive higher average daily gains and more efficient feed conversions from Charolais-sired calves These calves will produce optimum-sized carcasses with a higher percentage of quality retail product and consistently grade Choice with Yield Grades 1s or 2s

QUALITY. Cattlemen can count on registered Charolais bulls to sire consistent, high-quality calves that are unmistakably Charolais. The identifiable offwhite, yellow, chocolate or smoky influence was seen in market-topping loads of weaned calves across the country in the fall of 1996.

DEMAND. Published market reports and direct order buyers provide evidence Charolais-sired calves consistently top the market More pounds and a higher price paid per hundred weight target more profit to the cow-calf producer.

PROFIT. Research by the Roman L. Hruska U.S Meat Animal Research Center and leading universities has documented that Charolais bulls increase performance and profit. Cattlemen who retain ownership on Charolais-sired calves put them in the feedlot sooner, realize heavier and more efficient gains—resulting in earlier marketings and added profits

OPINION

History Not To Be Repeated

The avian influenza scare is always with us.

The most recent wakeup call came late last year and early this month when, first a dealer/hauler poultry operator working in the New York, New Jersey markets depopulated his flock and then, more recently, a commercial 123,500-bird layer flock was depopulated.

While it was determined in both cases that it was a non-pathogenic strain of avian influenza (and as such an official "non-event"), the owners voluntarily took steps to protect other flocks, just in case. This was certainly commendable, especially when you consider the large loss the process represents to the flock owners.

But for all owners of poultry flocks, an A.I surveillance must continue. It is more important than ever to observe increased biosecurity to decrease the risks of crossover contamination. Unauthorized people must be kept out of poultry buildings. Boots must be clean and disinfected before entering and leaving buildings. Do not visit other farms or use other equipment from other farms, and carefully log visits to and from your farm.

John Schwartz, Lancaster County agent says the cost of quarantines and depopulation is very expensive and often very emotional. So the goal of biosecurity is to keep germs away from your birds and animals and to keep your birds and animals away from germs.

We believe a continuing awareness of the A.I. threat is essential if we are going to maintain a viable poultry industry. We cannot forget the lessons we learned ten years ago when A.I. wiped out many poultry operations.

Former Lancaster County Agent, Jay Irwin brings us back to the heart of the matter. He says the losses experienced by growers in the mid-1980's caused tragedies and heartbreak that you could see in the eyes of the people involved.

This bit of history is one we don't want to see repeating itself.

Now Is The Time

To Understand Hitching To A Tractor

When a tractor is pulling a load, its rear tires are pushing against the ground. The backward and downward pulling of the load results in the rear axle becoming a pivot point.

The load being pulled acts as a force trying to tip the tractor backward.

The angle of pull that is created between the ground's surface and the attachment plane of the chain, draw bar or other attaching method is critical. The wider the angle is, the more likely the tractor could tip over backwards. As the hitching point onto the tractor moves further off the ground, the wider the angle of pull.

To Hitch To Tractors Properly

To prevent tractors from tipping over backwards and causing serious injuries or even death, it is important to hitch a load properly to a tractor.

When the hitching point is low, the tractor will either stall or the tires will slip. If the hitching point is high, the tractor will act like a winch trying to wrap the chain or hitching device around the tractor axle. When the tractor has sufficient power and traction, it will tip over backwards.

When trying to pull heavy loads or objects which are fastened like a trunk, it is important to remember to hitch as low as possible on the tractor. Even if the load is Dmoving, a low hitching point is critical if the object being pulled could suddenly stop.

A good example of this is a log which could suddenly dig into the ground. If the tractor is moving at 5 miles per hour, it would take less than 3/10,000 of a second for the tractor to roll up to a vertical position and continue over backwards.

To Select Garden Seeds

According to Dr. Tim Elkner, extension horticultural agent, one of the most important traits to look for in flower or vegetable seeds is disease resistance.

Read the individual seed variety descriptions closely for mention of resistance to disease, or look for capital letters such as F or V next to the variety names. These letters signify resistance to particular diseases and are usually found with tomatoes.

By planting resistant varieties, you can reduce the time and expense required for pesticide sprays. You can also grow plants where there may be soil borne wilt diseases that cannot be controlled with sprays.

This protection is part of the plant's genetic make up and you do not need to do anything special to receive this benefit other than planting a resistant variety.

Are you tired of being covered up with excess tomatoes and sweet corn in the summer? Select early and late maturing varieties in addition to the main season types of vegetables you enjoy. This way you can spread the harvest out over a longer period of time.

FARM FORUM

Editor:

Agriculture is Maryland's number one industry contributing greatly to our economic well-being and excellent quality of life. It provides all Marylanders with a bounty of wholesome food, as well as maintaining open space with its forests and farms for all to enjoy.

As I travel around the state and meet with farm groups, I find one of the foremost concerns is the loss of our valuable farmland and the threat this poses for the future of our agricultural industry.

Governor Parris N. Glendening has introduced House Bill 507 and Senate Bill 388 entitled, "'Smart Growth' and Neighborhood Conservation - Rural Legacy Program," as part of his "Smart Growth" initiative.

This program will serve to accelerate Maryland's efforts to purchase voluntary easements on contiguous tracts of agricultural, forest, and environmentally sensitive areas before they are permanently lost to development and urban sprawl.

I emphasize "purchase" because landowners will be compensated and "voluntary" because easements will only be purchased after agreements between the landowner and local government. This will serve as a safeguard in protecting the equity of one's property.

The Rural Legacy Program will be funded by re-allocating existing State funds from the State's portion of Program Open Space and General Obligation Bonds to provide funds for acquisitions in focus areas. Under this program, funds will be made available on a competitive basis to counties or groups of counties willing to focus their efforts to protect large and important concentrations or agricultural or other natural lands from sprawl development.

The end result of the proposed program is a commitment of $163 million to preserve more than 90,000 acres within the next five years. As the success of this pro-

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ARE YOU "GOOD NEWS"?
March 2, 1997

ARE YOU 'GOOD NEWS'?
March 2, 1997

Background Scripture:
I Thessalonians 2:1-13
Devotional Reading:
I Thessalonians 1:10

Not counting my student pastorates, I served four congregations during my ministry in the United Methodist Church. But I doubt that I could write to any of those congregations as Paul wrote to the church at Thessalonika: "You are witnesses, and God also, how holy and righteous and blameless was our behavior to you believers" (2:10).

What Paul is saying in this first letter to the Thessalonian churches that the good news he preached to them is essentially the good news he lived in their midst. Apparently Paul's enemies have made all kinds of attacks upon him and his message. So he is pointing, not to the words he spoke, but to the deeds he did while he was with them. They way he lived was the authentication of what he preached and taught.

What made his living among them so exemplary was the fact that his ministry there was "in the face of great opposition" (2:2). That's when living the life of Jesus among our peers is the most difficult. We may manage all right when no one is giving us a hard time, but living like our Lord is difficult when there are people speaking and acting against us. I'm afraid I haven't always excelled in that.

WORDS & DEEDS

I was at a program the other day and sat next to a gentleman who had been in a church school class that I had taught 10 years ago. I was amazed to find that he remembered the very words I had used one day when I was teaching. For some reason, the words stuck with him and I was very gratified. But I wish he could say as much for my life. "I'm not suggesting that my life was a negative influence, but that I wish that it had been more obviously the good news of Jesus Christ.

You probably remember that old much repeated story of St. Frances of Assisi, who asked a brother monk one day to go with him to preach in the village. As they walked through the village, however, the brother monk was baffled because St. Frances never began to preach. When, at last, they left the village behind them, the monk said, "But I thought we were going to preach to them!" St. Frances replied, "Ah, but we did! They observed two brothers exhibiting Christian love and that was the sermon we preached."

How can we preach the good news without words? Paul tells us: "But we were gentle among you, like a nurse taking care of her children . . . for you know how, like a father with his children, we exhorted each one of you and encouraged you and charged you to lead a life worthy of God" (2:7,11). Paul and his companions showed them the way to live for Christ and his example gave life to his words.

PLEASING MEN

Something else that made his living among them such good news is that he lived as if he were answerable only to God. "So we speak, not to please men," he said, "but to please God who tests our hearts. For we never used either word of flattery . . . or a cloak for greed . . . nor did we seek glory from men . . ." (2:4-6). Paul's conduct among them was based upon his desire to please God, not to make a name or even a living for himself. In fact, Paul's life pointed, not to Paul, but to his Master. Would that I could say the same.

I have lived long enough to know that if your goal is to win people to yourself it isn't all that difficult. You can learn to say and do the things people want to hear and see but, when that is our goal, our lives are more likely to be just more of the bad news that is so prevalent in our world.

So, this is a time to ask yourself that important, if not disturbing question: The life you live, is it good or bad news for others?

Ken and Marilyn Umble of Atglen, PA have been working with Nutrena Feeds since October 1995 and have benefited from the technology of Nutrena's Focus program.

"Our RHA is 22,900 and climbing fast. Currently we are averaging 81 lbs/cow on 2X milking and we are still increasing. When we started with Nutrena we needed more production at a better cost and that is exactly what we got. We have seen body condition improve and we know this is helping. Our Territory Manager, Robert Davis, provides us with prompt and dependable service and always follows through. In addition to the success with our cows, we have been very pleased with our calves on the Herd Builder program. We have cut weaning time down from eight to four weeks and the calves are healthy."

OK City Feeder Cattle

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK
FEBRUARY 26, 1997

Compared to last week: Feeder steers steady to 1.00 higher; feeder heifers 1.00 higher. Demand good for feeder cattle. Stocker steers 1.00-3.00 higher; stocker heifers 2.00-3.00 higher. Last week's 2-4 inch statewide rain gave another boost to the stocker and calf market. Demand excellent for grazing cattle. More rain this week. Graze-out wheat and early spring grasses will be plentiful. Quality of supply well below past two weeks on most counts. Genetic quality plain to average, moderate end attractive. Weigh condition average to full, some gaunt. Feeder flesh continues medium to moderate. Stocker flesh medium to mostly thin with very few new crop calves. Slaughter cows 3.00-5.00 higher. Slaughter bulls 2.00 higher. Packer demand excellent. Slaughter cow and bull supplies are sharply curtailed causing packers to scramble for numbers to sustain minimal kills. Total of 340 cows and bulls sold with 70 percent going to packers. Receipts this week 14,735; last week 16,564; last year 11,490. The meeting will be Wednesday, March 12, 1997 at 10:30 a.m. at the Harvest Drive Restaurant on Route 340 in Intercourse and will focus on requirements for membership, as well as a discussion of what is involved in transitioning the dairy farm to organic certification. Aaron Hoover, a CROPP member from Wisconsin will be on hand to share his experience on his organic dairy, and answer questions about what makes CROPP a unique organization with a great deal of experience and a bright future in Pennsylvania. Lunch will be provided.

If you have questions regarding this meeting or if you cannot make it to the meeting but would like more information about this opportunity, please contact Steven Fiscus at (301) 478-2103.

Scenic Mountain Co-Op Doing Well

WYOSX (Bradford Co.) — Recently, members of the Scenic Mountain Cooperative held their annual meeting at the Bonanza Restaurant in Wysox, PA. First order of business was to give to members their patronage dividend checks for 1996. Scenic Mountain Cooperative has paid a patronage dividend every year since they started.

James Broschart, President, led a discussion on the recruitment of new members for their cooperative. Scenic Mountain's market is an excellent one and has a quality premium program. Anyone who would like to learn more about their program should call Laverne McCarty at (717) 924-3963 or United Ag Services at 1-800-326-4251.

At the meeting, members also discussed their quality program and other matters that were brought up.

James Patsos of United Ag Services presented a $50 check and a certificate to James and Georgie Broschart for being the top quality producer in the Scenic Mountain Cooperative for 1996. Scenic Mountain Cooperative is a member of United Ag Services, which recognizes the top quality producers of their member cooperatives each year.

Patsos also discussed current market conditions and outlined what dairy farmers may expect in the next few months. The year 1996 has been a very unusual one with slightly better milk prices than 1995. However, increases in milk prices were more than offset by high grain prices.

Officers elected for 1997 were James Broschart, Dushore, President; Steven Hovan, Rome, Vice President; and Robin Fiester, Forksville, Secretary-Treasurer. Laverne McCarty, Forksville, is business manager for the cooperative.

United Ag Services provides marketing, management, quality control, accounting, and payroll services for small to medium sized agricultural organizations and individual farmers in New York and Pennsylvania. They can be reached at 1-800-326-4251 or (315) 568-2750.

Penn State Dairy Facility Projects Summary

UNIVERSITY PARK (Center Co.) — The Dairy Teaching and Research Complex at Penn State has been operational now for three years. With any new facility there are growing pains and adjustments. Fortunately we have gotten past those hurdles and are close to utilizing the facility to its full potential. The herd presently consists offo 160 milking cows, 20 dry cows, and 155 youngstock. The lactating cows on average are producing around 78 pounds of milk with a 3.8 percent milk fat and 3.1 percent milk protein. The somantic cell count has been averaging under 225,000. At this point in time, every cow or heifer that freshens will be involved in someone's research project until the fall of 1997. All the close-up dry cows and heifers over six months of age are being utilized for research. The following describes some of the projects that have been completed or are in progress at the dairy center.

Dr. Gabriella Varga and her graduate students have been focusing their attention on protein and carbohydrate metabolism in both lactating and dry cows. Theo Lykos, a recent doctoral graduate, examined the effect of varying ruminal degradabilities of protein and total nonstructural carbohydrates on the animals' metabolism, milk production and milk composition. Some conclusions drawn from their data suggest that the amino acid profile of bypass protein is not similar to that of the original feedstuff, steam flaked corn is a source of bypass protein, and roasted soybeans that are ground eliminate the added benefit of heating on protein degradability. In addition, they found that carbohydrate sources that are degraded rapidly in the rumen can increase both milk and protein yields.

Dana Putnam, a current doctoral candidate, has conducted several trials with close-up dry cows. His first project examined the effects of increasing dietary protein density on nitrogen balance in late gestation animals and on postpartum dry matter intake and production. Thirty-nine close-up dry cows were fed a diet with a total dietary crude protein of 10.5, 12.6, or 14.5 percent on a dry matter basis. No observed differences were seen in postpartum dry matter intake or production regardless of protein level fed. However, increasing dietary crude protein had some interesting effects on certin blood metabolites.

Heather Dann, a master's student of Dr. Varga, is beginning her project using dry cows. They will be feeding close-up dry cows two different sources of carbohydrates that vary in rate of ruminal degradation. They will also be determining the effect of prepartum and postpartum ration interactions on animal performance such as health, dry matter intake, and milk production.

Projects conducted by Dr. Jud Heinrichs and his graduate students are geared mainly to heifers. Julianne Longenbach, a recent master's graduate, examined feed bunk space requirements for rapid rates of growth and performance for heifers aged 4, 11.5, and 17 months. They looked at growth responses and feeding behavior based on various feed bunk space allotments. Heifers were fed a high quality total mixed ration in a free-stall or bedded pack group housing system. From their results they made the following conclusions about adequate feed bunk space: 0.0 inches per animal for 4 to 8-month-old heifers; 12.0 inches per animal for 11.5 to 15.5-month-old heifers; and 18.0 per animal inches for 17 to 21-month-old heifers.

Brian Lammers, a current doctoral candidate, has been conducting research involving calves, growing replacement animals, and heifers in their first lactation. Brian and Dr. Heinrichs have recently completed a study examining whey protein concentrate versus dried skim milk as the major protein source in milk replacers. The four treatments were 100 percent skim, 67 percent skim and 33 percent whey protein concentrate, 33 percent skim and 67 percent whey protein concentrate, and 100 percent whey protein concentrate. The results from their study showed that when no grain was fed, calves receiving the 67 percent whey protein concentrate had higher average daily gains and better feed conversion efficiency ratios. However, when grain was offered free choice, no milk replacer effects were found between the different whey protein concentrate and dried skim milk protein ratios.

Brian Lammers' second project is a long-term study evaluating the effects of accelerated growth rates and estrogen implants in prepubertal heifers. There has been some speculation that estrogen implants may effect mammary development. He will be collecting data on 68 heifers from 4.5 months of age up until they complete their first lactation. To date, Brian has collected data on growth and feed efficiency. The results of the growth data showed that increasing growth rates from 1.8 to 2.2 pounds per day increased structural growth by 27 percent. There does not appear to be any effect on conception rate with accelerated growth or estrogen implants.

Brian's third research project involves determining the protein requirements of growing heifers. There has been almost no work done that clearly defines what the protein requirements are for dairy replacements. Brian will be feeding total mixed rations varying in protein content (12, 14, 16 percent crude protein on a dry matter basis) to heifers 6 to 11 months of age. All animals will be fed individually and dry matter intakes will be controlled. He will be evaluating various growth parameters as well as feed efficiency.

Dr. Lisa Holden is another faculty member actively conducting research with an emphasis in forage systems and intensive grazing. Her current doctoral candidate, Kathy Soder, has finished her first project. They examined the influence of dietary cation-anion balance in grazing dry cows on metabolic health and milk production. Their treatment diet consisted of an anionic salt pellet which was compared to a control pellet. Both diets contained a high calcium content. Kathy is in the process of analyzing the data.

These are the summary of just a few of the projects being conducted at Penn State. In subsequent articles I'd like to share other projects and activities that are going on at Penn State's dairy facility. Many of the projects that were mentioned in this article have been or will be presented at the American Dairy Science Association meetings. Anyone interested in obtaining detailed information on these projects or providing suggestions for future research proposals can contact the extension office at University Park: 814-865-5491.

Students Sought For Farm Bureau's 'Classroom At The Capitol'

ALBANY, N.Y. — High school juniors with an interest in the workings of state government can learn more about the process by applying for New York Farm Bureau's upcoming Governmental Awareness Institute.

Scheduled May 13-14 and headquartered at the Albany Marriott, "The Institute offers students a first-hand look at how their state government functions," said Mark F. Emery, director of communications for the 27,00-member New York Farm Bureau.

"Last year, students had an opportunity to hear from Governor George Pataki; Assemblyman Bill Magee; John Boltz, an independent lobbyist; Rex Smith, managing editor of the Albany Times Union; Jeff Martin, a dairy farmer from Madison County and NYFB's state membership chairman; and Bob Bellafiore, a special assistant to Governor Pataki," said Emery. They also visited with their own assembly member and participated in a computer game that allowed them to be a lawmaker for a term.

He said, "We are currently lining up a number of excellent speakers, tours, and other activities for this year's institute."

High school juniors interested in attending the 1997 Governmental Awareness Institute should contact the chairman of their school's social studies department, an agriculture teacher, the county Farm Bureau president in their area, or call the NYFB Communications Department at (518) 436-8495 before Feb. 21.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau National Legislative Tour Set

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania farmers will be meeting with their congressmen and U.S. senators to discuss the need for action on priority farm concerns during Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Washington Tour, March 5 - 6.

About 200 farmers will be traveling from across the state to participate in the annual event. The farmers, who are members of county farm bureau national legislative committees, will be meeting face-to-face with their elected representatives to express their concerns. "We will be recommending Congressional action based on policies developed by the grassroots membership of our organization," said PFB President Guy Donaldson of Adams County.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is an independent, non-governmental, voluntary organization which represents 26,625 farm and rural families in 54 county units. It is a part of the nation's largest general farm organization, the 4.7-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Among the top national issues concerning Farm Bureau members are budget reform and tax relief. Farm Bureau policy strongly supports a constitutional amendment to balance the federal government and bring government spending under control. An amendment passed the House last session but failed in the Senate by one vote. New legislation has been introduced and will be voted on soon in the House and Senate. Farm Bureau urges passage of the amendment which would ban deficit spending unless three-fifths of the members of Congress vote otherwise. "Congress has not balanced a federal budget on its own since 1969. Interest on the federal debt now consumes 20 percent of tax revenues — money that could be better spent on essential government programs or for pro-growth tax cuts," said Donaldson.

The current capital gains tax hurts agriculture and other businesses that rely on intensive investments in property and equipment in order to operate. Most capital gains in agriculture are due to inflation. Farmland is held an average of over 28 years during which time the price level in the U.S. more than quadruples. As a result, farmers pay huge capital gains tax bills on inflationary — rather than real — increases in the value of their investments. Farm Bureau wants the 28 percent capital gains tax rate reduced to below 15 percent or, even better, eliminated altogether. "A capital gains cut would spur economic growth and create jobs," Donaldson said.

Over 99 percent of all farms in the U.S. are family-operated. "Current estate taxes make it difficult to pass the family farm from one generation to the next," Donaldson said. "Present laws often force the sale of part of the family farm in order to pay the estate taxes." Farm Bureau policy calls for increasing the estate tax exemption from the current $600,000 level to $2 million and indexing it for inflation. In calculating estate taxes, farmland should be assessed at its agricultural, rather than its market value. "We also believe estate taxes should be deferred until the farm is sold outside the family," Donaldson said.

Agriculture has been accused of being the major culprit in the nonpoint source pollution of rivers and streams. Since non-point pollution doesn't come from any place specific like a factory smokestack or a sewage plant pipe, it's difficult to pinpoint its exact source. Other sources, such as stream bank erosion, runoff from urban development, storm water runoff or wildlife waste — cannot be distinguished from agricultural sources. "Farmers have already taken positive steps to reduce nonpoint source pollution," Donaldson said. "Soil erosion rates have been reduced by 24 percent over the last 10 years." Soil erosion on 36.5 million acres enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program has been cut by 90 percent. As Congress moves to rewrite the Clean Water Act, Farm Bureau wants to make sure the new law includes better methods to determine the extent of different sources of pollution, as well as accurate ways to evaluate the effectiveness of farm conservation practices. Future Clean Water programs should rely on voluntary cooperation rather than strict regulatory enforcement and should provide information, technical assistance and adequate cost-sharing funds to help farmers implement conservation practices.

The Clean Water Act also contains the basis for wetlands regulations which have been expanded far beyond the original intent of the 1972 law by regulatory agencies and the courts. "The current wetlands policy has become a restrictive land-use policy affecting mostly private property owners," said Donaldson.

Congress has never defined "wetlands" in law. Federal agencies have expanded, without public input, the interpretation of what constitutes wetlands. They are now regulating many areas that never have water on the surface and, in fact, are dry. Farm Bureau wants Congress to take responsibility for deciding the national wetlands policy. "Laws and regulations governing wetlands should be written so that an average person can recognize a wetland," Donaldson said.

A ban preventing the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) from issuing rules on workplace ergonomic injuries expired last October. "The Ergonomic Protection Standard has received little attention so far in farm circles," said Donaldson, "But it could become the most costly regulation ever to hit agriculture." As defined by OSHA, an ergonomic hazard is any activity that causes fatigue or discomfort in workers. "That could be almost any manual activity in farming," Donaldson said, "Farmers will be forced to double their labor force to meet ergonomic requirements. Complaints of fatigue or sore muscles would be enough to trigger OSHA enforcement." Farm Bureau wants Congress to delay OSHA's ergonomics rule until there is a scientific consensus on the cause and remedies for ergonomic injuries.

Dairy Day Message: Futures Opportunities Can Help Stabilize Milk Price Volatility

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

EAST SMITHFIELD (Bradford Co.) — "At one time dairy policy commanded a lot of respect in Washington, particularly the farmer end of it," said Dr. Robert Yonkers, Penn State assistant professor of Agricultural Economics.

"Now days," he continued. "I don't believe that dairy has the clout that it used to have and there's a lot of reasons for that . . . but it's no longer a sacred cow. It's not a protected form of our government policy. Neither are any agricultural products."

Yonkers delivered his message to over 200 dairy farmers who attended Bradford County Dairy Day held at SRU High School, Monday, February 17.

Yonkers' message began with a look at the history of dairy economics and the rise of regionalism. "One of the reasons dairy lost clout has to do with the rise of regionalism. At one time if you supported dairy interests or if you were pro dairy farms just about anywhere in the country, you had pretty much common beliefs, common values and common goals toward what you wanted government to do toward the dairy industry. We had a much more homogeneous industry," he said.

In the past, he continued, farms of different sizes were much more similar in regards to the type of technology that was used. Today farms that average from 50 to 60 cows often use much different technology than those with 500-600 cows. Some variances include the housing systems, manure management and feeding systems.

"It's much more difficult to find common ground about what those different types of farmers and managers of those operations want in policies if they can get it," said Yonkers.

But if we examine them, we can treat the minor problem before it becomes a major one."

Bradford County Dairy Princess Robin Wilson and alternates Stacy Mattocks and Julia Wanck were also on hand throughout the day drawing door prize winners and distributing pounds and pounds of dairy products.

The first real split in policy, Yonkers said, came in the 1985 farm bill when Upper Midwest Cooperatives voted for a dairy termination programs when Southwestern Cooperatives didn't like the idea of a dairy termination program for fear that the milk supply deficit would grow even larger. Compromises led to higher prices in the Southwest and a dairy termination program. Another contributing factor was the regional shift in milk production. In the mid 1980s, the highest producing dairiy states each declined in production except Pennsylvania, while other states gained by leaps and bounds in milk production.

One of the biggest factors, however is the shift of government away from private industry. "These changes started back in 1981 and ever since then congress has been trying, and the president has gone along, to decrease the role the government plays in intervening in agricultural markets. This isn't something that's just happened in the past year. It's been a 15-year trend trying to undo the policies that we started with in the 1930s and '40s," said Yonkers.

The 1996 farm bill (FAIR Act of 1996) is also an attempt to get the government out of the farming business.

"This (bill) has a seven-year life instead of a four- or five-year life like our farm bills had been having. The reason is that the Republicans were real hot to include the farm bill in the budget bill. Well, they never got a budget bill so that means they didn't get an ag bill either, but the seven -year life is to reduce the budget deficit to zero."

The 1996 Farm Bill also has provisions to phase out price supports for wheat and feed grains in addition to phasing out the price support program for dairy.

Without the cushioning effect provided by a government that bought excess butter, powder and sugar to keep the prices above the support price level, prices will be more volatile.

"I think producers, with more price volatility, are going to need to pay a little more attention to what's going on in the markets, because what's going on in the market is going to affect their milk check," said Yonkers.

In addition Yonkers claims that there is an increased need to anticipate both ups and downs in the market. There is also a need for more risk management strategies to deal with the volatility.

One form of risk management is to invest in the futures market or hedging.

Jamie Zimmerman, Director of Field Services for Dairylea Cooperative noted that their cooperative as well as others now offer the opportunity to farmers to lock in milk prices well in advance through using forward contracting.

"We're seeing a large amount of volatility out there which translates into a fair amount of stress. One of the answers to dealing with the stress has come in the form of the futures markets and the futures contracts we've been trading," said Zimmerman.

Futures contracts are not new to agriculture. For many years futures for grain, coffee, sugar and many other commodities have been traded to offset the risk of a volatile market.

"From a producer's standpoint, using figures contracts are a risk management tool," Zimmerman noted.

In June of 1993 cheddar cheese and non-fat dry milk were traded on the coffee, sugar and cocoa exchange. Fluid milk futures followed in December of 1995. In January of 1995 fluid milk opened on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and this past summer, butter contracts were introduced. A futures contract on the basic formula price (BFP) is expected to be introduced soon.

There are a couple of different ways to manage price risk. The first is hedging on your own. "A lot of large grain producers in the Midwest do a lot of their own hedging. That's when a producer shifts their risk from the farmgate to the futures market in order to establish a known price for their commodity well in advance of when it's produced or sold," Zimmerman explained. One other way to shift price risk is to do forward contracting.

"Basically there's an intermediary between the producer and the futures market," he said. Using an intermediary helps take the mystery out of the futures market.

"We see this as an aid to business planning," said Zimmerman. "The basic function of business management is planning. If we don't know what we're going to plan, it's hard to get one of those basic things done. But if we know what some of the things will be in the future, like the price of milk, it's easier to plan," he noted.

In order to take full advantage of forward contracting it is essential that each farmer know his or her cost of production — not the USDA average — the individual costs of each farm.

"You must understand the cost of production," said Zimmerman, "It doesn't make any sense to lock in a price that won't be profitable for you."

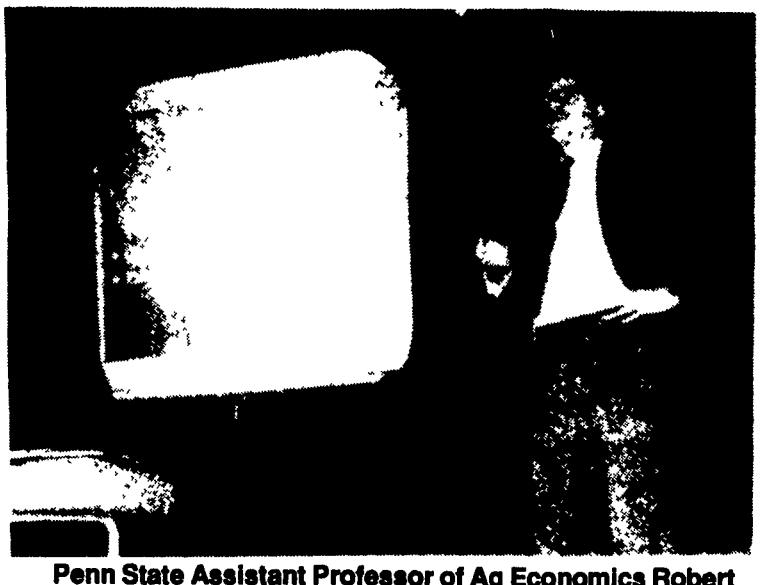
Zimmerman is quick to caution that the futures market may not be for everyone.

"If it will bug you that your neighbor received five cents more for his milk this month than your contract price, then this is not for you. If you want to plan for the future and guarantee a price, then this may be for you. These are tools to be used when the opportunity presents itself," he said.

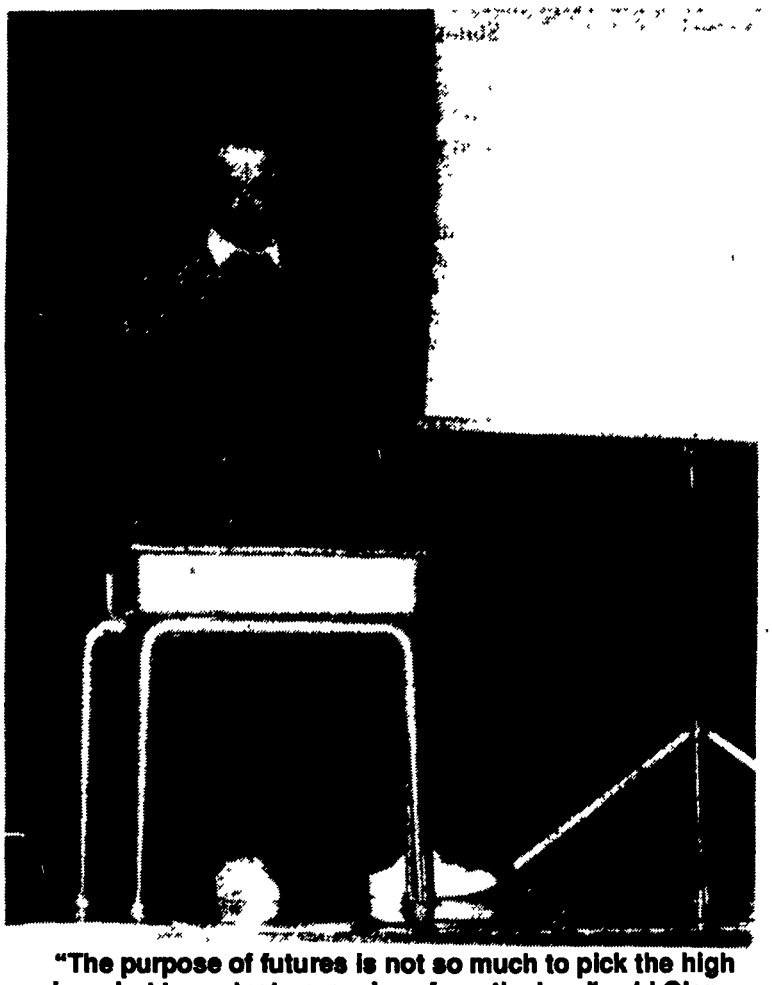
(Turn to Page A24)

About 425 exhibitors and guests packed the gym and meeting rooms at SRU High School, East Smithfield, to learn about milk prices, forward contracting, earn pesticide credits and learn about dry cow care at Bradford County Dairy Day.

Jamie Zimmerman, director of field services for Dairylea, explained the benefits and risks associated with forward contracting and hedging your milk production. "It's an opportunity issue," he explained.



Penn State Assistant Professor of Ag Economics Robert Yonkers explains why dairy policy is no longer a "sacred cow in Washington" at the annual Bradford County Dairy Day.



"The purpose of futures is not so much to pick the high prices, but to protect yourselves from the low," said Glenn Gorrell, a dairyman from Smithfield, who shared some of his own experiences with forward contracting his milk.

Survey Examines Farm Computer Use

Those are some of the ways that local farmers use computers to improve farm viability and profitability. And while the technology continues to evolve, one reason for the purchase of a computer is clear: improved management of the farm.

Almost a dozen computer users and those interested in purchasing a computer attended a demonstration provided by Tony Talarigo, owner of Tony's Electronics, Bernville, recently at Tulpehocken High School.

While Talarigo provided insight into the inner workings of computers — helping to explain how they work — Lancaster Farming provided a survey of questions to members of the Tulpehocken Adult Young Farmers Association.

Lancaster Farming spoke to several of the members about the use of computers and the farm. The survey included 10 questions that covered a variety of topics.

Lancaster Farming addressed the questions to William and Lolly Lesher, Bernville; Donna and Jim Dietrich, Hamburg; Pat and Dennis Bross, Myerstown; and Denise Stump, Stumpland Farm, Bernville.

They are dairy and crop farmers from throughout Berks County and provided some insights into how they use computers and what they plan to do to improve their use.

1. What computers do you use, and how?

William Lesher: We use a Swan 486 system with the following software: business financial accounting with Quicken. We use Lotus and WordPerfect for various things in our dairy store and dairy farm. We also use a Packard Bell system for Lolly's consulting business which goes with her on the road. We also have a nutrition program built into it.

Donna Dietrich: We use a Gateway 2000 486DX50.

Pat and Dennis Bross: We use a Packard Bell Legend 2000.

Denise Stump: We use a Pentium-based computer.

2. What software do you use, and how?

William Lesher: For our nutrition work, we use a dairy nutrition program called Spartan from Michigan State University. We use Quicken for our business financial records and payroll. We uses Lotus for spreadsheet work and a word processing program, WordPerfect, for signs, letters, etc.

Donna Dietrich: Our Windows 95 system is used by my husband, Jim, who sells seed corn for Pioneer Company. Recently we are checking into purchasing Farm Works for field mapping, yields, and crop record keeping.

Pat and Dennis Bross: We use a Windows 95 program that contains Quickbooks, a banking program, S.A.T., the Encarta Encyclopedia, P.C. Bible Study, and Math Blaster.

Denise Stump: We use Easy, FACCTS, PC Dart (a program from the Raleigh DHIA), and Field Map.

3. Why did you decide to use a computer at your farm?

William Lesher: Lolly learned to use the computer in college. In her first job out of school, when we went into partnership with my parents, we decided to put the financial part of the business on the computer.

Donna Dietrich: We decided to use the computer for the seed corn business and for our financial records.

Pat and Dennis Bross: I wanted to cut down on my paperwork.

4. How, exactly, has your computer helped you improve farm efficiency and profitability?

Lolly Lesher: It has made recordkeeping easier, more organized, and the data more accessible. Information is the key to management. Our computer helps us retrieve, organize, and understand data quickly and in a variety of forms.

Donna Dietrich: Our computers and recording are more accurate.

Pat and Dennis Bross: So far, it hasn't!

Denise Stump: We just got it.

5. Do you use the Internet? If so, how?

Lolly Lesher: Not yet. But we look forward to getting on Dairy-L.

(Editor's Note: Dairy-L is a "user's forum" where dairy farmers and industry representatives can share information about all aspects of dairy farming, available on the Internet.)

Donna Dietrich: No.

Pat and Dennis Bross: Yes. We use it for school reports, farm information, and communication with family overseas.

Denise Stump: No.

6. What about the Internet, if you use it, do you use to improve farm efficiency and profitability?

(Editor's Note: This question was answered previously by several computer users.)

Pat and Dennis Bross: The Internet provides easy access to articles from Dairy-L and other magazines. It allows us to correspond with our feed management consultant.

7. What are some other things you and your family uses the computer for?

William Lesher: Lolly uses the laptop computer for her public relations business. It provides a great source for information and allows her to operate her database system.

Donna Dietrich: Our children use it for games. The CD Rom equipment is used for music.

Pat and Dennis Bross: Our oldest daughter uses it for reports and homework. The younger children play educational games on it. We use it to keep in touch with family and friends and we do our banking from home.

8. What about computers in general do you find difficult or frustrating?

Lolly Lesher: It is easy to get frustrated using computers because we use what we have learned to do. Knowing it can do more but learning how is tough. Not using the computer to its full potential is expensive and frustrating.

Donna Dietrich: (I find it difficult) basically understanding the whole system.

Pat and Dennis Bross: The hardest is trying to make sure the software and computer work together.

Denise Stump: The hardest thing probably will be learning how to use everything, but there are plenty of people willing to give tips. Also it's frustrating when someone is scared to use it because they're "afraid" they might mess it up.

9. What about the Internet do you find difficult or frustrating?

(Editor's Note: This question went unanswered by the survey participants.)

10. How has the Internet helped your farming operation in ways that you hadn't foreseen?

(Editor's Note: This question also went unanswered.)

Apparently, for many respondents, the Internet is a new and untested area, particularly for many aspects of the farm.

Overall, many participated in one of several general meetings recently to learn more about the inner workings of computers. They believed they needed more direction about how to make more use of the system.

In the case of Denise Stump, Stumpland Farm in Bernville, she noted, "We just got ours and haven't managed to do much with it yet."

At the meeting, the participants agreed that using the computer has helped them in their business but there was still plenty to learn.

Dairy Management Seminars Held

RONKS (Lancaster Co.) — Hoober Feeds conducted their 5th annual Dairy Management Seminars last month. Over 100 Lancaster County dairymen attended the all-day seminars designed to highlight some areas where profits are typically lost without writing a check directly for the expense. The areas presented were dry cow and close-up dry cow management, viewing the farm as a business, management of fresh cows and heifer growing management.

Dr. Jim Nocek of Spruce Haven Research Farm, in New York State spoke first about dry cow management. He pointed out that proper care of the dry cow meant looking at her dry period as two distinct periods, the "early" dry period and the "late" or "close-up" dry period. Nutrition and management need to be different for these two periods of time. Dr. Nocek explained that the early dry period is a time to maintain or improve body condition. It is also a time to give the rumen a chance for rebuilding of the rumen papillae through feeding high forage diets, although he related that diets for these dry cows can be highly variable in the amounts of hay, haylage, corn silage and grains just so long as they are properly balanced. The farmers listened intently as Dr. Nocek discussed the close-up dry period and showed information on the detrimental effects of allowing these cows to drop too much in feed intake during these 2-3 weeks before freshening. "These cows experience a natural drop in intake during this time period. If intake drops 25% below normal, these cows have a very high probability of developing some kind of metabolic disease within the first 30 days postpartum," said Dr. Nocek. He highlighted ways to keep these cows on feed and emphasized having a properly balanced ration to compensate for the increased nutrient demands and decreased intakes during the close-up dry period.

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County Extension Dairy Agent, spoke next, with an emphasis on the need for farmers to look at their farm as a business. "We often hear that a farm is a good place to raise a family; but in order for it to be a good place for a family it must first be a good business," explained Glenn. In keeping with the theme of finding those areas where profits are lost, he challenged the dairymen to examine their farms as a business. He pointed out that buildings and machinery do not make good investments compared to cows. Cows provide a quick return on investment, a high return on investment and they reproduce. Machinery and buildings do none of these things. Glenn also highlighted some areas to boost profits such as selling more cows for dairy purposes, reducing feed costs, reducing calving intervals and reducing cull rates. He pointed out that many farmers can do these things simply by changing some management practices. Glenn also reminded them that a $1.25 reduction in milk price for cows averaging 19,000 lbs of milk meant that on an 8% loan you've lost the ability to service $1000 of debt per cow. He cautioned the audience to use lending agencies wisely and invest in the things that provide the best return on the dollar. He concluded that we need to be looking at profit per cow and not only milk per cow.

Dr. Nocek returned in the afternoon to discuss how proper feeding of proteins and carbohydrates can result in high production in early lactation cows. He emphasized that in addition to high quality forages, proper protein and carbohydrate nutrition can encourage cows to hit and maintain high peaks in production without severe depletion of body reserves. He described how proteins and carbohydrates need to be balanced to provide good rumen fermentation. He also suggests ways to increase digestibility of the proteins and carbohydrates coming from the grains and forages. In addition to providing an update on rumen protected amino acids, Dr. Nocek talked about effective strategies for feeding fats. As with dry cows, Dr. Nocek strongly emphasized that dairymen need to feed these fresh cows palatable feeds that keep them eating and that keep the rumen functioning properly.

The meeting concluded with Tom Nauman, Nutritonist with Hoober Feeds, talking about improving profits by getting heifers into the herd at a younger age and at a larger size. He pointed out that heifers entering the herd at a larger size produce more milk on the average than smaller ones and he showed data to suggest that heifers entering the herd earlier end up having more lifetime milk than heifers entering the herd later. A third area he looked at was the economics of getting heifers into the milking string sooner. "It actually costs less to calve heifers out at an earlier age. By reducing the days from birth to first calving, we reduce the days she is consuming forages. Even when hay prices are reasonable, we can get her milking for less money if we feed her the proper amounts of protein and energy for fast growth," Tom explained. He emphasized the need to monitor intakes, especially when the heifers are out on pasture during the summer months when grass growth slows. He also emphasized the need to test forages for heifers and to keep them on a balanced diet.

Other highlights of the day were door prizes and lots of good food. The dairymen left feeling that their hearts, bodies and minds were nourished.

Dairy Day Message:

East Smithfield Dairy Farmer Glenn Gorrell has taken advantage of the program offered through Dairylea for about one year.

"In my opinion, for everybody who sells milk the most important thing should be how much money you get for your product and to know what the market is doing and where the market is going," Gorrell stated.

Before Gorrell began putting his money on the line, he watched the market and the weather very closely. Even so, in his first attempt at locking in his price, Gorrell lost some money. The milk price actually went higher in August and September than he had contracted for. However, he has since made back that money and bolstered additional milk checks with the contracts that were taken out for November, December and January.

Even so, Gorrell admits that he's learning more and more about the market all the time. His biggest piece of advice to farmers who want to try their hand at forward contraction is that the purpose is not to get the most money, but to have an insurance policy of sorts when the bottom falls out.

"Futures are not so much to pick the high prices, but to protect yourself from the low," he said. He also adds that it's important to know your individual cost of production and to let everyone who has an interest in the milk check know exactly what is going on.

"If a partner doesn't know what you're doing, it may be a problem," Gorrell notes. "Your banker might be interested too, especially if you're hedging on your own."

After the discussion on milk prices, the focus of Dairy Day shifted to sessions on pesticide usage, where farmers could get needed pesticide credits and a program on dry cow management where farmers heard how to fine-tune dry cow rations.

Other Dairy Day opportunities included a chance to meet with the 41 exhibitors and take advantage of free blood pressure screening, lung function analysis and blood sugar screening. Visitors also had the chance to have their cholesterol levels checked and hear suggestions for treating various foot ailments from a visiting podiatrist.

"It's a good thing for us to be here," said podiatrist Kathleen Panepinto as she examined a farmer's foot. Sometimes people won't make a specific point to come out to treat minor problems.

News From New Bolton Center...

School of Veterinary Medicine
UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

Today's dairy farmer must be a superb livestock and business manager, an agronomist, economist, soil, water, and waste management expert.

Awareness of the long-term impact of agricultural run-off on streams, rivers, and ground water has led to legislation governing the number of animals a farmer can keep on a given piece of land and how the disposal of animal waste is handled. The farmer has the formidable task of maintaining a profitable dairy herd with minimal impact on the land.

This complex task can be accomplished with the aid of computer models. Researchers at University of Pennsylvania's Center for Animal Health and Productivity (CAHP) at the New Bolton Center campus, who earlier developed a feeding strategy model for dairy herds, are now looking to create a more complex model to integrate not only feeding strategies but also cropping and manuring strategies to keep the production and health of a herd at maximum while reducing its environmental impact.

"We are looking at the entire dairy farm, its soil management, and the feed crops that can economically utilize animal wastes," said Dr. James Ferguson, associate professor of nutrition. "At first we looked mainly at feeding strategies for production and health, and we didn't worry too much about the waste products and their composition. However, manure and urine nitrogen can contribute to pollution of soil and water, so we began to develop feeding formulas to reduce the level of nitrogen in dairy cow wastes."

"We're looking at the whole cycle of nitrogen utilization on the farm...to use manure nutrients to grow the right crops to feed the cow to get the right balance of nutrients to get the best efficiency of utilization by the cow," said Dr. Charles Ramberg, professor of nutrition and director of the CAHP. "It's an integrated approach."

Pennsylvania produces twenty-five million tons of manure per year. The major component of manure is residue from animal feed stuffs, undigested feeds and metabolic waste products. A smaller portion of manure is bedding and waste water. Therefore feed formulation can have a significant impact on manure composition. Feed formulation is an important component of a nutrient management plan. By optimizing the utilization of nutrients in a ration by altering feed sources, both the amounts and types, it is possible to maximize the production of milk or meat while minimizing the amount of nitrogen produced by the animal, thus reducing manure volume and manure nutrient content.

Of particular interest is research strategies which exam feeding practices which can lower the protein content of the ration yet maintain milk production. A particularly useful strategy is to improve the amino acid supply of the diet through use of supplemental amino acids while reducing total protein content. By optimizing feed formulation and achieving the right amino acid "profile," a dairy cow requires less nutrients to produce the same amount or more milk, research at New Bolton Center's experimental farm has shown. Dr. Ramberg said, "... nitrogen in the wastes can be reduced by 25% or more."

Achieving that may require an unusual mix of ingredients, some of which are grown on the farm, others from commodity purchases available through traditional means. "Some of these are not conventional things that cows would normally eat," Ramberg said. "Things like fish meal and other ingredients that have specific characteristics."

Most dairy farmers grow a portion of the feed for their animals. So it is important that the manure produced is managed and utilized effectively to grow crops appropriate to feed back to the animals while minimizing run-off and leaching loss.
Cows have a complex digestion system where food is broken down with the aid of bacteria and the bacterial products are absorbed by the cow. When feeding a cow, the bacteria must be kept in mind, in essence cow and bacteria must be fed. "We must look at what happens to the feed in cow's rumen," said Dr. Ferguson. "The rumen bacteria need protein to support and grow fermentation. That process breaks down the cellulose and starch into volatile fatty acids which provide energy to the cow. Bacteria break down feed protein into ammonia which is then converted to microbial protein that is later absorbed in the cow's intestine. But if there is too much rumen degradation of feed protein, excess ammonia is produced in the rumen. The excess ammonia is absorbed, converted to urea and excreted in urine, mixing with fecal waste to form manure. Urea in manure is subject to various losses such as volatilization, leaching and runoff."

The issue is further complicated by the fact that microbial protein alone is not enough to keep a cow in good health and high milk production. The feed must be balanced in such a way to provide carbohydrates that supply energy, just enough feed protein to be utilized by the bacteria, and additional feed protein that can be absorbed by the cow in the intestines. To add to the complexity, it must be taken into account what type of feed crops can be raised economically by the farmer.

"We look at soil productivity level and management history," said Dr. Ferguson. "Then we build a feeding and cropping program. The cropping program considers the needs to feed the animals and to utilize the manure. For example, the land may be ideal for alfalfa, but alfalfa fixes nitrogen from the air and when fed as silage, contains too much rumen degradable protein. Therefore, to improve the farm utilization of nitrogen, alfalfa may need to be fed as hay in addition to haylage and combined with corn silage at amounts which improve feed efficiency and manure utilization. In addition, we may recommend that a rye cover crop follow corn to take up the residual nitrogen in the soil."

The New Bolton Center researchers have developed a reduced protein feeding program that increased milk production and decreased nitrogen waste. It also reduced the feed cost. This is just the first step. By developing a computer model that encompasses the entire cycle from growing feed crops to milk production to fertilizing croplands to planting, the New Bolton Center researchers hope to develop a strategy that will enable the farmer to have maximum milk production with minimal adverse environmental consequences while making a profit. The work at University of Pennsylvania is supported by USDA/CSRS moneys, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Friends of Pennsylvania Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the Center for Animal Health and Productivity at New Bolton Center, and a number of corporations.

Joe Kavanaugh, Bovine Podiatrist Talks While He Works

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

MT. AIRY, Md. — Joe Kavanaugh calls himself a bovine podiatrist.

With a broad grin and twinkle in the eyes, the Maryland cattle hoof trimmer sometimes uses that term to describe his profession to new acquaintances. He is especially fond of telling clergymen that he "makes the lame walk."

And while his dairy farmer clients wait in line to contract Kavanaugh to fix their cows' ailing feet, they get a healthy dose of his own brand of entertainment free with the service.

"All I ever wanted to do was fool with cows," affirms this confessed cow enthusiast who says he's one of the happiest men on earth pursuing his chosen profession.

Though his father was a Maryland State Police officer, the Rockville native spent every waking moment possible as a boy on his grandparents' dairy farm.

"The moment school was over in the spring, I'd be at my grandparents' farm at Westminster," relates the veteran cowman. "I had a grandmother and a great-grandmother who let me get away with just about anything. It took my parents two months to get me back in shape every fall when I went back home."

Even while in school, he wanted only to be out on the farm.

"My second-grade teacher finally convinced me to learn to read by going out and buying a book called 'The Wobbly Calf'," he admits. "Hey, it was about cows, so that got my interest. And when I was about eight, I visited Irvington Farms (home of the legendary Holstein sire Irvington Pride Admiral). With their beautiful barns and cows in fresh sawdust and employees in white uniforms, I thought I'd found heaven. It was my first pilgrimage to Mecca."

Almost as much as he loves working with cows, Joe Kavanaugh enjoys making people laugh. His country-philosopher brand of humor, mixed with a broad knowledge of the dairy industry and a lively interest in what is happening in the world and political fronts, keeps Kavanaugh's clients chuckling while he improves the foot and leg health of their cattle.

While still in high school, Kavanaugh began breeding cows for the Curtiss company. Following classes for the day, he would make his scheduled A.I. visits to area farms. His vo-ag teacher had encouraged him to get involved in agriculture, reminding him that one need not have a farm to be involved with them.

Stopping one day at Kingstead Farms, Damascus, he met Pennsylvania hoof trimmer Jake Emig. The idea of being able to improve a cow's overall health by correcting her walk intrigued him. He undertook six weeks of training under Emig's instruction, and, in 1974, began hoof trimming on his own. Soon he was traveling to Virginia, Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania to serve a growing list of clients.

But Joe Kavanaugh had always wanted his own herd of dairy cows. In 1981, he and his wife Jeannette purchased a farm in western Maryland's Garrett County and assembled a milking string of 70 head. Within two years, the herd had surged from a 15,000-pound herd average to a 19,000-pound one, even while he continued to do some hoof trimming.

Though the herd was developing quickly, interest rates were running to levels as high as 22 percent, while milk was $10-11 per hundredweight. Believing that remaining in the milking business would not be profitable for them, the Kavanaughs opted to sell the herd in 1983. Their 65 milking head and 73 head of young stock averaged $1,100.

"I was on a roll with those cows. It was a traumatic thing to do," he remembers. "But farming is a business, and it was a business decision."

In Kavanaugh's early years of trimming, the profession was one of somewhat seasonal demand, mostly spring, fall and in midsummer, for cattle shows. Then came an industry introduction that he outspokenly pinpoints as the beginning of an upswing in the need for cow foot help.

"Along came the magnetic feeder," says Kavanaugh," and some of those girls would pull in there and just eat and eat. Then they'd founder."

Other factorrs he attributes to the downfall of cattle foot health include the use of Total Mixed Rations (TMR) and other changes in feeding and pushing for production that put high levels of grain and less fiber in modern dairy rations, as well as feedlot environments where cows' feet remain damp.

"'Hot' rations ruin cows as two-year-olds. Those type rations have so much starch in them that if affects the circulation to the leg," says this longtime observer of cattle feet and their problems.

In addition to feeding and housing changes, Kavanaugh also blames modern dairy breeding philosophy with putting hoof trimming service in such demand. And he pulls no punches about outlining that philosophpy.

"Legs and feet in cows have gotten commoner. We don't have good flat-boned cattle any more. We never used to trim the feet of two-year-olds. Our genetic base is narrowing and we can see the results of five generations of breeding for cow index."

Then he adds with a classic touch of Kavanaugh dry humor; "We're just so grateful; there's no end to the work it's generated for us foot trimmers.

"I often trim feet 364 days a year. Christmas is the only day I've never trimmed a foot. But there are some days when I only do 15 or 16 head, due to the serious amount of foot work they require," he adds.

His affection for the bovine species makes him a stickler for perfection in his work. Each animal in turn is firmly secured with wide rubber belting to a hydraulic tilt table, then gently laid on her side on the table so that he has ready access to the bottom of the hoof. Using specialized tools, he trims away unhealthy tissue, pares away misshapen parts of a foot, removes imbedded stones or gravel and treats infected areas. Feet that have needed aggressive trimming due to serious infection are wrapped with heavy-duty bandaging materials to keep them clean and dry while healing.

Before setting the "patient" back upright and releasing her, Kavanaugh meticulously checks with a small, flat footboard that every part of the outer rim of the trimmed, shaped hoof touches the board. If it does not, he will retrim until satisfied that the hoof is shaped to his perfectionist

"A properly-trimmed foot should leave a perfect 'horseshoe shape' track behind when that cow walks away," he says.

Foot warts, a plague which affects many dairy herds, create many of the problems Kavanaugh attacks daily on the hoof end of his patients. While the virus remains dormant in cold weather, warming weather can generate an epidemic of the painful warts.

He counsels his clients to develop a schedule of at least semi-weekly use of a footbath. He also blends a mix of oxytetracycline with sterile water for use in spray bottles to spray on affected his clients to use as a safe treatment on cows' feet as the animals move through milking parlors.

He also blends a mix of oxytetracycline with sterile water for use in spray bottles to spray on affected hooves, which he recommends to his clients to use as a safe treatment on cows' feet as the animals move through milking parlors.

"Barnyards need to be kept scraped and clean and cows turned out on ground as much as possible in good weather. A couple of hours of sunshine on a cow's foot helps tremendously. The more time out on dirt the better," he suggests. "God didn't make cows' feet to stand 24 hours a day in a sloppy, damp environment. Wet [illegible] more susceptible to problems."

As might be expected, working with the kicking equipment of a cow has had its dangerous moments in Kavanaugh's 24 years of experience.

"I got kicked in the head one time that you could hear my skull crack. I looked away while fastening down a cow's foot to talk to the owner and she got me," he explains, adding with a grin, "I still talk, but I never look away from those feet until they're secured."

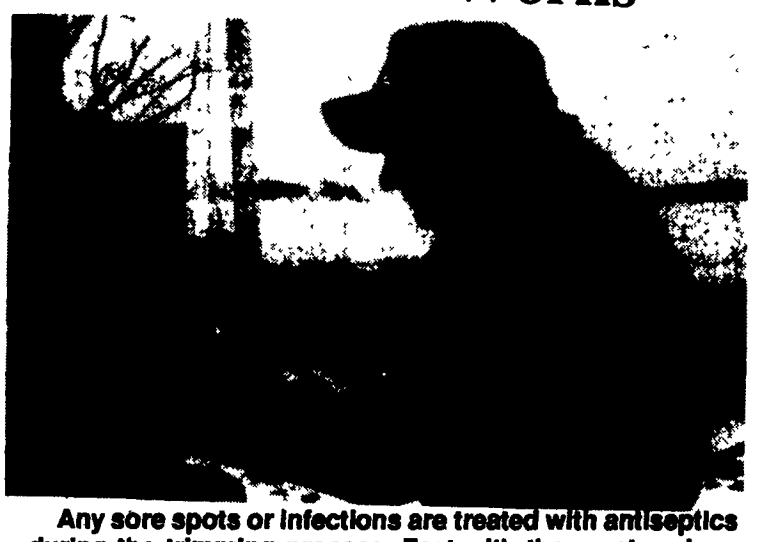
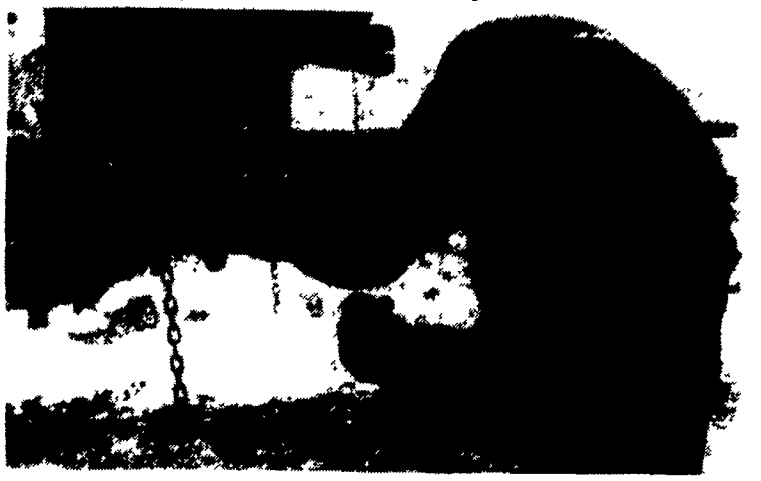
Removing small amounts of hoof material at a time, Joe Kavanaugh trims and shapes a dairy cow's foot to remove damage wrought by viral warts, stone damage or a variety of other afflictions which cause the animals to limp.



Any sore spots or infections are treated with antiseptics during the trimming process. Feet with the most serious problems are carefully wrapped and bandaged after treament to keep the foot clean and dry while it heals.



A sharp, curved hoof knife is one of the key tools of a foot trimmer's trade. On a few rare occasions, Joe Kavanaugh has missed a hoof and carved into his own hand, one of the physical hazards of the profession.

Single Northeast Marketing Order Sought

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) Dairy Committee reiterated is support to create one Federal Milk Marketing Order in the Northeast United States, according to an announcement recently by Harold Curtis, committee chairman.

"A single order would put Northeast dairymen in a better position to secure premium prices based on utilization in the region," the Warren County dairyman said. The proposed single marketing order would replace the three presently operating in the Federal Milk Marketing Order system in the Northeast.

"We realize that the marketplace for dairy products is national, but at the same time we believe that a single marketing order would place our dairymen in a stronger bargaining position," Curtis stated. "The dairy industry needs a long term solution to arrive at an accurate means to set dairy prices. Consolidating the milk marketing orders and including the unregulated areas are necessary first steps."

The basic formula price for milk dropped from $15.37 per hundredweight of milk to $11.34 between September and December 1996. There has been some price improvement but the Farm Bureau dairy committee wants further action by state and federal authorities.

The Farm Bureau committee earlier had petitioned the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) to halt a proposed drop April 30 in an 80-cent premium price. Presently, and 80-cent premium price per hundredweight (11.6 gallons) of milk, set by the PMMB, is paid to producers. The premium price would be reduced by 30 cents, which Farm Bureau opposes. Curtis says that Farm Bureau is presently reviewing the fast-moving developments in the marketplace and is open to all options, including an increase in the premium presently paid to producers.

Calling for closer oversight of the National Cheese Exchange, Curtis said that this thinly traded exchange has too much direct influence on all milk prices. "In the long run, this influence could be minimized with a restructuring of the federal milk marketing order system," Curtis said, "if it includes a revision of the basic formular price for milk."

wise caused him a few days of pain. He once sliced deeply into tissue below the thumb and down toward his wrist. When he stopped by the doctor's office, he was told that it would probably take eight stitches to close. But there was a problem — the doctor had no anesthesia in the office.

"I told her to go ahead anyway," he relates with a laugh. "When she got to six, I told her that was enough. But I was back to work the next day."

With a waiting list of clients in central Maryland and southcentral Pennsylvania, Kavanaugh limits his work mostly to that area, though he does continue to serve three herds in Virginia and some in western Maryland. He has taught his skills to eight trainers over the years.

"Few people want to learn the profession any more," he acknowledges. "It's work. A lot of trimmers have dropped out."

"I'm glad I was around for the 'big times' in the registered cattle business, when good bulls and deep, family pedigrees were important," reflects Kavanaugh. "When they put the value of the breed on less than one percent of the animals, they threw water on the fire of the breeding industry. The registered breeder used to dictate to the commercial man what bulls to use; not it's the other way around."

Kavanaugh is especially critical of what he feels may be pressure within the breeding industry to over-score young cattle during classification.

"There can be a lot of pressure on a classifier to make a two-year-old, high-index cow score a high Very Good, because of the potential for embryo sales. There should be a rule that it takes a classifier committee to make a VG-89 two-year-old, just like it takes a committee to make score an EX-97 cow. If she's that good, then the committee scoring would just add that much credibility to it," he figures.

"And no EX-97 cow that reaches that level is going to do any genetic-transmitting damage to the breed, but 'hot' two-year-olds scored VG-89 might," he emphatically adds.

But Joe Kavanaugh is far from giving up on the breeding cattle industry, and very much enjoys his sideline business of helping some of his clients prove young sires. Kavanaugh is instrumental in moving those young bulls out into a variety of herds in the area, to sire the offspring that will develop proofs on their transmitting ability, and in monitoring those daughters as they move into milking strings.

When occasionally tempted to look back with regrets about his decision to sell his herd, or any other decision of the past, Kavanaugh calls up from memory the counsel of former Garrett County dairymen and good friend Weldell Umble.

"It was always nice to 'sit by his campfire' and seek his advice," he relates. "He said there were two things really important in life. One was that the only thing you leave your children are memories, good or bad. The other is to never look back."

Although he tries to steadfastly not dwell on any disappointments of the past, the irrepressible Kavanaugh has thought ahead to the future with his usual brand of humor: "And I always say that when I'm gone, I want them to put on my gravestone: So many feet, so little time."

Frederick County Plans Walk-About

FREDERICK, Md. — The next Frederick County walk-about is to be held from 10 a.m.-noon, March 12, with Jeff and Judy England serving as host.

The Englands own Eng-Land Acres and milk 145 cows, in addition to raising all forages and grains.

The replacement animals are contracted out to be raised. Jeff renovated the milking parlor last year into a 15-stall herringbone parlor with indexing rail.

This year's major project has been the renovation of the bank barn into a springer and maternity area, J-bunks, headlocks, gates, and [illegible] have been added to help in animal care and handling.

The purpose of a walk-about is to allow dairy producers a chance to learn more about dairy practices that are being implemented on other farms in the area. Most of the time will be spent walking around the facilities and dicussing the components of the operation and how they contribute to the success of the dairy business.

The informal atmosphere of these sessions allows for producers to pick up management tips, equipment and facility ideas, and provide a way for farmers to share success stories with other farmers in the community.

The Eng-Land Acres is located at 5620 Detrick Road, near New Market, Maryland. From the I70 exit for New Market, take Rt. 75 north to the first light at Rt. 144. Travel east on Rt. 144 less than a mile to Detrick Road. Turn left onto Detrick Road and travel a half-mile to the farm, located along the left. Signs will be posted.

Dairy Days Events Offer Perspective On Farm Design, Life

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — A family counselor provided some perspective on life and some tools for developing and maintaining an environment conducive to good mental health as part of Lebanon County Extension's Dairy Day event this week.

Meanwhile, at the Lancaster County Extension Dairy Day I, held Tuesday, a milking systems expert from the University of Wisconsin-Madison discussed in technical detail what makes a good milking system, how to run checks on the system, and what considerations might be made in design.

The Lancaster County Dairy Days II is set to be held March 4 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center and a report is to be published in the next issue of Lancaster Farming.

While not the first dairy day events of the year, the Lancaster and Lebanon events usually attract a strong attendance and provide speakers offering useful information.

The events are held in the late winter/early spring because that time usually fits better in the schedule of the dairy farmer.

The events also provide a primer for the year in getting some new information injected into considering farm business strategies.

At the Lebanon event, Jerry Shenk, a family counselor, talked about building hopes in families.

He discussed how to deal with fears. First he said, is to recognize the fear for what it really is. Second is to value that fear.

He said that fears are natural and are part of being human, as God intended. Once the fear is recognized then the value of it can be realized and some plan to deal with that fear can be developed. Shenk said that is next in dealing with fear — developing a vision for what to do to take care of that fear.

He said that one a vision is developed then an action plan can be developed next, but that action plan has to be in line with what is understood. The level of committment to that action should be congruent with understanding, he said.

And then when dealing with that fear, he said it is very important to "trust the real you."

And faith is important in being able to learn how to accept those things about being human that are not necessarily seen as advantageous to achieving a "successful" life, and then, once learning how to accept those things, then to deal with them.

Shenk discussed some of the fears that involve farm families, and some of the results of attempting to handle them alone, without really recognizing or admitting the existence of those fears.

He also told stories about situations with which he has been involved in helping to resolve that involved fears, a lack of dealing with them, the anger and frustration and resentment that resulted, and how the situation was resolved after the fears were acknowledged, and the intent behind the apparent anger that caused the rift in the family relations was communicated and how it changed the attitudes and lead to foregiveness and healing.

He talked about a father who by any account was mentally and physically hard on a son, and how the son was pushed to achieve and pursue a goal that wasn't really what the son wanted to pursue.

After some physical punishment resulted from the son getting a "B" grade instead of the usual "A," and after some intervention and discussion between counselor and father, counselor and son, and then father and son and counselor, it turned out that the reason the father was so hard on the son was because the father grew up during the Depression and had a tough life growing up and didn't want his son to have to suffer the way he did.

After learning the intent of his father's actions, the son's attitude changed. It worked out well, Shenk said, after the father realized that the son was doing well and was going to be alright without harsh parental oversight.

The father's fears, left unaddressed by him, manifest themselves in extreme compensating behavior that did nothing to resolve the fear.

That is not the way to live happily and healthfully, much less set up an easy and successful generational transfer of a farm.

Shenk said that it is an unavoidable part of the human experience to be hurt by loved ones. It is going to happen, he said, adding that it should be cherished in the knowledge that it is part of the human experience, as God made it.

But forgiveness must follow, and forgiveness, Shenk said, is something we do for ourselves, not for others.

Foregiveness involves personal and interpersonal healing and hope.

It also involves a choice to let go of the hurts that have been made.

Letting go and foregiving should be done with the primary goal of healing ourselves, he said. As an illustration of a good example of how to foregive and to be able to keep the tragedies of life from destroying life, he briefly talked about how American comedian and entertainer Bill Cosby has dealt with the murder of his son.

Shenk said Cosby is a great example of not allowing pain and tragedy to control his life.

"Let's think of forgiveness as something we do primarily for ourselves," he said. "In the First Testament, Jesus said this clearly many, many times."

He also talked about anger and how it comes from a feeling of some fear or an act that violates and gives a sense of being wronged.

Shenk said anger is definitely different for men and women. In brief, he said that it is destructive to those close to us, it can be temporary if faced, and it will just cause more problems if kept inside.

The way not deal with anger is to allow to vent in unhealthy outlets, Shenk said. Those include attempting to get even and make them pay, pushing or avoiding the other person, to allow your own physical condition to be affected, and to judge oneself too harshly.

Hate, he said, is frozen love.

Forgiveness, as far as requesting it, requires action. He said it is accomplished when the two people involved can engagte in a mutual relationship. It requires that trust be re-established and also some type of action, such as overtly giving.

Shenk gave an example of a couple that had a problem when the husband violated a trust and the wife didn't feel that she could ever forgive him, even though he admitted his wrongdoing and vowed it would never be repeated.

His action was to swear that he would not change his shirt for a specified number of months and when people would inquire as to why the shirt wasn't changed, he would tell them about what he did to violate his wife's trust.

At first she didn't think it would make a difference. After a week she started feeling that he was making a fool out of himself, then after several weeks, she started to pity him, and eventually she made him stop and his demonstration was accepted as an overt action to substantiate the re-establishment of trust.

But one of the biggest obstacles to resolving the inevitable hurts that people inflict upon one another is the inability to say, "I'm sorry."

"Saying it out loud is good, helpful and hopeful," Shenk said, but added that some people do it in other ways, such as a women may cook a favorite meal as a way of apologizing, or a man may do something special for his wife.

However, actually verbalizing, "I'm sorry," and meaning it does a lot.

Sheep Sale To Host National Southdown Sale

NORTH SCITUATE, R.I. — The New England Sheep Sale will be hosting the 1997 Jim Lightfoot National Southdown Sale, in honor of New England Southdown breeder Jim Lightfoot of New Hampshire.

A special Southdown breeders clambake is being planned prior to the show to honor him. The show and sale will be held July 18-19, at the Big E Fairgrounds' newly completed Mallory Agricultural Complex in West Springfield, Mass.

The sale is open to all breeds of sheep, and entry fees are $15 for ewes and $20 for rams. The entry deadline for the sale is April 15.

The number of sheep entered in the past sales averaged about 250 head, and that number will probably increase this year because of the hosting of the National Southdown Sale.

Nancy Ferguson of Corvallis, Ore. will be judging the sale and Dan Schlichter of Washington Courthouse, Ohio will be the auctioneer.

The New England Sheep and Wool Growers is the sponsor of the sale. This will be the 55th sale as it has been an annual event since 1942. The New England Sale has become one of the major purebred sheep sales in the United States because it attracts consignors and buyers from all over the nation. Southdown entries will come from the top breeders in the country.

For consignors the sale offers special cash jackpots for breed and supreme champions besides the low entry fees and the availability for all breeds to participate. There are several classes for lambs of different ages and a bred ewe class. For the buyers, the sale raffles off several special buyer credits for up to $200. The rams from each breed in this sale are offered for sale at one time, with the exception of the champion and reserve champion who will be auctioned off first individually, to make selection and bidding on the ram of the buyer's choice easier. The exception to this rule will be the Southdown ram sale because of the expected increase in entries. They will be sold one at a time according to the judges' sale order.

In conjunction with the sheep sale, there is a used sheep equipment auction held. The auction has a $10 entry fee per consignor for items that are to be prelisted in the sheep sale catalog. Post entries are also welcome and there is no entry fees for these items. The sale commission from the equipment auction goes directly towards the Northeast Youth Sheep Show, which is also held the very same weekend at the Big E Fairgrounds.

For more information and/or entry forms, contact Debra Hopkins, sale manager, 1125 Danielson Pike, North Scituate, RI 02857-1523, (401) 647-7281.

Managing Feed Costs Workshop Scheduled

FREDERICK, Md. — A Managing Feed Costs Using Marketing Tools workshop is scheduled for March 17 and 24, 1997 at the Frederick County Extension Office. This four-hour, two-day workshop will teach dairy farmers how to manage feed costs using various marketing tools. The class will focus on how to use forward contracts, futures contracts, and options contracts to manage grain and soymeal costs.

Examples will be used throughout the course to highlight how these marketing tools can be used to guarantee feed costs well in advance of when the feed is needed. In addition, problems will be given to workshop participants to reinforce the concepts and tools.

The workshop will also cover the recently introduced milk futures and options contracts and how they could be used to lock in milk prices.

There is no registration fee, but participants must call (301) 694-1594 ext. 3576 before March 13 to allow planning for handout materials and room setup.

The Frederick County Extension office is located just off Rosemont Avenue at 330 Montevue Lane, Frederick.

The Cooperative Extension Service's programs are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age or national origin.

Partnering Strengthens Agriculture's Future

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Exports are brightening the agricultural outlook, but since exports are politically driven, pitfalls abound. This was the concensus from the speakers participating in CoreStates Bank's agri-education seminar on Thursday.

Sonja Hillgren, Farm Journal editor, opened the day-long seminar that focused on partnering to make agriculture stronger by addressing how partnering meets world demand.

Hillgren spoke of China's volatile past and how she perceives it will influence world trade.

"The U.S. trade deficit with all foreign countries last year swelled to $114 billion, the largest deficit in eight years," Hillgren said.

Of these figures, she pointed out that the U.S. trade deficit with China is $40 billion and growing. Although the figure with Japan is higher, the trade deficit is on a downward trajectory and it is projected that China's deficit soon will overtake Japan's.

China's power in agricultural trade will "wrap into one giant bundle the problems we have experienced in the past with both Japan and the former Soviet Union," she said.

"China's internal ups and downs — and our ups and downs with China — will affect farmers in Lancaster County. Chinese agricultural and trade policies will affect the price of feed for poultry, hogs, as well as pork and poultry exports."

"We in American agriculture are increasingly dependent on our fortunes in Asia to which we are shipping $24 billion worth of agricultural products this year. Exports to Western Europe are only $9 million."

A recent study by International Food Policy Research Institute predicts that China's grain imports will hit record highs over the next two decades and can be met by farmers in the U.S., Canada, and Australia.

Since Chinese markets are so politically volatile, people fear a repeat of the 1970s boom followed by a bust in the 1980s, but Hillgren said many things are different in this era.

Most customers are free-market economies rather than bankrupt Communist regimes. Exports are less dependent on raw commodities and involve more value-added products.

On the other hand, value-added products open up a whole new set of problems. With E.coli outbreaks and British mad cow disease, imported safeguard measures are being imposed by several countries.

Hillgren and several other speakers addressed the problems that arise from the stronger value of the U.S. dollar compared to other currencies. Japanese purchases of U.S. exports in particular are limited because of this. If interest rates are raised, the increase will make U.S. products more expensive and harder to export and importing will seem more feastible.

To help modify the negative aspects of exporting, Hillgren recommends that Congress be required to write a good agricultural research law this year, that a steady increase rather than cuts be established in foreign development assistance, that free trade agreements be negotiated, that a global mechanism be established for handling health and safety issues, that environmental policies protect our land base without making production difficult, and that Crop Revenue Coverage be available to all farmers.

David Kohl, ag economics professor, spoke of partnering to take charge of change.

"If you don't take charge, change will take charge of you," he said.

While the past years have been difficult for many farmers, Kohl said the real winners are emerginng in agriculture with the better getting better and the worst following behind.

Kohl encouraged farmers to consider spending money in order to make money in value-added products, which he sees as the most profitable aspect of agriculture.

With a relatively strong economy, Kohl warned against being caught up in the micro-macro trap, "which is making a long-term decision based on short-term outlook."

Since 80 percent of all decisions made by people are based on emotion, Kohl said there is a tendancy to expand operations when business is prospering. He cautioned farmers to consider how they could meet expenses if prices decline.

Kohl said that in the 1960s, the food budget was 30-32 percent of the household budget compared to 10-12 percent today.

"If it wasn't for strong agriculture, we couldn't do what we do now," he said. He encouraged farmers to educate the public where seven out of 10 people have never stepped foot on a farm.

As farms expands to incorporate more family members, Kohl said that it is necessary that one person "be the top dog" when it comes to making tough decisions. He said that it is better for a younger person to work for someone else three to five years before working on the family farm. This enables them to make mistakes on someone else's money and to pick up new ideas. Contrary to public opinion, it costs a 65-year-old couple 125-150 percent more to live than a younger couple, Kohl said, and this figure

Farm Bureau Recommends Improvements For Dairy Industry

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — A representative of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau testified before U.S. Sen. Arlen Spector and U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman on Feb. 10 at a hearing held at Keystone Junior College near Scranton.

On behalf of the PFB, Harold Moyer of Wyalusing offered several recommendations to improve the future of the dairy industry, especially in light of the recent record plunge in farm milk prices.

PFB represents 26,625 farm and rural families statewide. Moyer is a dairy farmer and serves on PFB's State Dairy Committee.

Referring to the 27 percent drop in the Basic Formula Price (BFP) for milk between last September and December, Moyer said, "The financial strain that roller coaster prices are putting on many Pennsylvania dairy producers is real."

While milk price projections are optimistic for the remainder of 1997, Moyer said, ". . . many producers are still facing serious financial stress with the lower prices now being experienced."

Attention has recently been focused on the activities of the National Cheese Exchange in Green Bay, Wisconsin. The Exchange trades an estimated one percent to three percent of U.S. cheddar cheese production, yet it has a direct impact on pricing over 90 percent of the nation's milk supply.

Prices on the Exchange underwent the largest drop in history last October following a period of record high prices.

"Producers have legitimate concern about the effect of the National Cheese Exchange lowering the price of milk too fast and too far for market conditions," said Moyer. "Recognizing this concern, Farm Bureau requested action (last November) to be taken to help stabilize producer prices."

Moyer commended Secretary Glickman for responding quickly and favorably to many of Farm Bureau's requests including making advance school lunch purchases of dairy products, pruchasing $5 million worth of cheese for domestic food programs and increasing the flow of dairy products into international food assistance programs. Glickman also announced last month that USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service would begin collecting data on cheddar cheese prices received by manufacturing plants across the nation as a way of having a more accurate source of discovery for the cheese price.

Moyer pointed out that "The dairy industry has a stake in its own future as USDA has been given a mandate to consolidate Federal Milk Marketing Orders and is open to consider other possible changes in the way milk is priced."

Addressing Secretary Glickman, Moyer said, "Pennsylvania Farm Bureau believes that our greatest opportunity to not only address current concerns, but also our long-term competitiveness in the Northeast, is for you to provide the necessary environment for producers to come together and bargain for the best possible price that markets will allow."

To accomplish that, Farm Bureau is recommending that the future consolidated Northeast Federal Marketing Order include all current federally unregulated areas in the region. "It is time for everyone in the Northeast dairy industry to play by the same rules," Moyer said.

Currently, three separate federal orders control milk marketing in parts of Pennsylvania while the largest geographic portion of the state is regulated by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board.

"The disruption in markets created by the current patchwork of regulations is costing Northeast producers premium dollars that the market could provide with more uniformity," Moyer said.

The differences in prices set for milk in various parts of the United States is also an important issue to Northeast dairy farmers, Moyer said. He pointed out a Cornell University study showing conclusively that milk has value based on the location of milk production, processing and consumption.

"We recommend the Secretary (of Agriculture) give full consideration to this study . . .," Moyer said. "Northeast producers should be allowed to benefit from producing milk where it is needed."

Moyer noted that Farm Bureau is encouraging consideration of changes in the calculation of the Basic Formula Price for milk.

"More price stability is needed for many producers to survive," Moyer said. "Changes that would provide an accurate price discovery and less volatility is a tall order." Stability would eliminate not only the bottoms, but also the peaks of price swings. "We as producers need to recognize the trade-off," Moyer said.

Farm Bureau also strongly supports the nationwide adoption of what is commonly known as the "California Standards" for solids in milk. "Producers across the country know higher solids in milk would be well accepted by consumers and would create a greater utilization of our product," Moyer said. "Adoption of higher solid standards would require no expenditures of government funds and would greatly enhance producers' prices."

The final issue addressed by Moyer concerned the North American Free Trade Agreement. "The NAFTA agreement was signed without Canada opening its dairy markets," he said. "Canada needs to be brought back to the negotiating table and (to) truly address free trade in the dairy industry.

"Freer markets and trade will continue to bring challenge and opportunity to all dairy producers in the Northeast," Moyer concluded. "If we're provided the necessary changes to allow us to take full advantage of the marketplace, we can meet those challenges and welcome the opportunities."

Adams Holstein Board Advances Program Plans

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Plans for a spring tour, a follow-up report on membership enrollment, and the approval of an operating budget for 1997, topped the agenda at a meeting of the board of directors, Adams County Holstein Association, held Saturday evening at the Landing Restaurant in Hanover, Pennsylvania. President Kevin Holtzinger presided.

Membership Chairman Marvin Brown reported a current total of 58 members enrolled, 12 short of goal for the club. Persons interested in supporting this dairy industry organization through membership are encouraged to call him at 359-7700 or call Kevin Holtzinger at 259-7211.

Breed Improvement committee chairman Todd Gulick supported his suggestion of a dairy tour to Franklin County by presenting a list of Holstein breeders as possible hosts. Contacts will be made with the farmers and arrangements made for transportation and lunch. An early April tour date is desired.

Treasurer Dean Lobaugh presented a proposal to provide insurance coverage for the Dairy Princess program. This was adopted on action by the board. President Holtziner reviewed the proposed operating budget for the current year, reflecting an increase for the Dairy Princess/promotion programs and a doubling of the funds to be awarded in the club's scholarship program. This was adopted with minor modifications.

Looking ahead to the next annual meeting, Phil Van Lieu offered information on optional meeting places. The board voted to hold this event at the community firehall in Harney, Maryland, on Tuesday evening, October 21, 1997. State Director Marvin Brown reported that the South-central Championship Show will be held on Saturday, August 9, 1997, at the fairgrounds in Shippensburg, PA.

Partnering Strengthens Agriculture's Future

should be kept in mind when farm partnerships are formed.

A Siskel and Ebert version on the economy was portrayed with a debate between Dr. Barry Flinchbaugh, professor of ag economics at Kansas State University and Dr. Mark Edelman, economics professor at Iowa State University.

The two bickered back and forth about the pros and cons of raising taxes, raising interest rates, and dealing with inflation.

Edelman was a former student of Flinchbaugh and the two often contested economical issues and have since used their debating skills to help audiences understand both sides of economic issues.

Using the same charts, the two interpreted the figures differently. Flinchbaugh believes that interest rates should be raised now to solve the inflation problem. Edelman believes inflation isn't high enough to worry about and is largely due to energy trends. He foresees higher interest rates having a dampening effect on agriculture.

Both agreed that the national deficit problem has not been solved and that something must be done immediately to lower increases in social security and medicare and medicaid expenses to prevent financial disaster later.

"If ag will prosper in the next decade it has to be through exports and can not improve through U.S. consumption, which is the result of dwindling population," Flinchbaugh said.

"Exporting is the greatest success story in agriculture. While other industries are importing more and more, ag is exporting more and more," he said. The figures show $32 billion imports in agriculture compared to $60.1 billion in exports.

Although Flinchbaugh painted an excellent picture for agriculture's trade, Edelman gave a thumbs down on the benefit of overall trade. He said, "International trade has much more risk than our own (U.S.) markets. . . . The trade picture looks excellent, but the political picture does not. The China market could go to nothing tomorrow."

John Blanchfield, ag manager for the American Bankers' Association, talked on how political decisions will affect agriculture. He believes agriculture is in excellent shape because in 1996, ag assets reached $1 trillion compared to a $155 billion debt load.

With the government offering no guarantee to bail out farmers if prices drop, Blanchfield said that the decision shows that "The best decision maker is the farmer, not Uncle Sam. The opportunity is to exceed to your highest dreams or fail miserably. The no guarantee attitude is what has made this government great."

Blanchfield gave a top 10 list of signals and changes for agriculture, many of them centering on trade. He also see major changes to the conservation reserve program, which is pushing for more land to be incorporated into the Chesapeake Water Shed and encouraged farmers to look more into the issue.

The Internal Revenue Service has agreed to wait a year to mandate that income from a crop that is grown and harvested must be reported the same year and not held over another year for tax purposes.

"Expect to see federal intervention in the cheese exchange. Instead of riding in with money, the government will ride in with regulators," Blanchfield said of milk prices.

He also warned against the "interesting" ways of selling crops that have surfaced. Remember the adage, "If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is," he said.

H. Louis Moore, agricultural economist, gave his ag outlook for 1997, which has been written about in previous issues of Lancaster Farming.

Other speakers included Andy Young, state FFA president, who told how FFA has changed in recent years but continues to teach impart strong leadership skills to youth. Jimmy Mullen, county 4-H ambassador, spoke on the ongoing need for farmland preservation programs to insure farms today are here for tomorrow's future.

$3,600 in donations were received last year for the scholarship fund in memory of the late Jack Miller.

Houser related that the Executive Board made a business decision to convey mature funds of $28,000 from the scholarship Dreyfus fund of $58,000 to the general fund during 1996, in response to PHA's financial operating deficit. PHA is paying a higher interest rate to the scholarship fund than it had been earning with the monies on certificates, but a lower rate than was being charged on its line of credit.

President Houser noted that more than 1,100 heifers were purchased to fill export orders last spring. The 435 sellers of those animals were paid within 30 days of delivery of their cattle to the export farm. When some of those sales were not completed as quickly as had been anticipated, and more cattle held at the export farm longer than expected, selling expenses rose, leaving the association with an operating deficit for the fiscal year.

Changes in membership fees are being studied by the board, Houser told the 150 business meeting attendees. Membership in PHA was 4,100 in 1996, with more than 3,400 renewals and new members already signed for 1997. Looking ahead to the future, Houser has appointed a planning committee to assess PHA's role in the changing dairy industry.

In an update on show activities, Houser announced that the annual Spring Holstein Show at Harrisburg will be dedicated to the late J. Arthur Baxter. Baxter, a former state Holstein president, was killed recently in a farm accident at the family's Stoneboro dairy operation.

Houser announced the candidacy of Thomas Kelly for the office of national vice president of the Holstein Association. Kelly, a former national Holstein director from Pennsylvania, operates a registered Holstein herd at Tyrone. During the resolutions portion of the program, PHA delegates unanimously voted to support Kelly's candidacy to the national vice president position. That election will be conducted during the national Holstein annual meeting, to be held in June at Grand Rapids, Michigan.

State Holstein treasurer Dean Johnson, Warren, reviewed the financial reports for fiscal 1996 and the background of the association's operating losses at $469,000. Payback of those losses is scheduled by the association over the next 10 years. Johnson noted changes being planned in the handling of export cattle orders, including working more closely with exporters who fund the sales with their own capital and contract with PHA for per head fees for selection and assembly.

"In over 37 years, about $35 million has been put back into the Pennsylvania economy through the sale of cattle," said Johnson.

During brief farewell comments to the business meeting assembly, retiring PHA executive director Nichol noted that he had worked with 18 different state Holstein presidents and had the opportunity to do many interesting things. He reminded members of what he sees as tremendous marketing opportunities for cattle opening up in countries that formerly relied on European suppliers, due to lingering concerns around the world over the disease BSE.

Nichol also noted that he hopes to remain active in the dairy industry and plans to write a book about his experiences with the registered Holstein business.

"I see an ever-changing dairy industry and a need to develop new programs as it downsizes," predicted Ken Raney in his interim executive director report. "We're asking for your input and your ideas."

He attributed the success of PHA to the commitment and enthusiasm of thousands of volunteers over the years and to the work of a dedicated staff that helped lead the state organization to national and international leadership.

Raney said he hopes to continue the PHA's involvement in both domestic and international sales of cattle, noting a current sale selection and assembly of cattle for delivery to Saudia Arabia. The new executive director also shared his hopes of revitalizing the Spring Showcase and Easternal National sales, both offering opportunities for PHA members to merchandise from their breeding programs.

"By working together, our best opportunities lay ahead," Raney predicted.

Two members of the executive board were elected during meetings of two of PHA's six membership regions. Creedin Comman, Carlisle, was re-elected from the Southcentral region. Doug Seipt, Easton, was elected to represent the Southeast region, replacing retiring member Dean Hartman, Sinking Spring. Hartman also served as convention chair for the Reading annual meeting.

Resolutions supported at the annual meeting included one that reflected Pennsylvania Holstein members' dissatisfaction with current beef prices. That resolution called for a change in the beef checkoff program, in which no promotion funds would be deducted for any animal selling for less than $100. That resolution is to be forwarded to the National Beef Board and, if rejected, a referendum on the national beef promotion checkoff program would be called for.

Other resolutions unanimously supported by the PHA assembly included farm vehicle exemptions for trailers and semi-trailers for farm use, support for the Right to Farm Act, keeping food safety issues under the jurisdiction of the state Department of Agriculture, tax-valuing farm residence land the same as agriculture land when under Clean and Green jurisdiction, and the appointment of a committee be made to study ethics issues as related to the dairy cattle industry and reporting its findings back to the PHA board and membership.

PHA further supported a resolution to support Obie Snider, Imler, to be reappointed to the Penn State Board of Trustees.

WINTER FORUM

In a departure from prior years, a state Winter Forum session was held during the Thursday afternoon session of the annual meeting. Winter Forums, conducted by representatives of national Holstein, have traditionally been held at several locations across the state. Their purpose is to inform and gather grassroots input from the membership and delegates to the national convention, on policy proposals being offered for consideration by the national organization at each annual meeting.

Leading the discussion at the Winter Forum were national president and Pennsylvanian John Cope, Grantham, Pennsylvania's national directors Ron Wood, Mansfield, and John Howard, Willow Street, and national Holstein chief executive officer Steve Kerr.

Two key issues which generated lengthy debate were a proposal to raise registry fees and a proposal to make changes to an open hardbook of Holstein registry. The proposals will likely go to delegate debate and voting at the 1997 national convention.

In outlining the proposal for a registry fee increase, national president John Cope reviewed the Holstein Association's financial history of the past several years. During the 1980s decade, Holstein operated profitably five of the 10 years. No year in the 1990s had National Holstein finances operated in the black, until 1996, when a robust last quarter pushed finances into slight profit margin for the fiscal year. While the Association is basically debt-free, the annual income is not covering the cost of operating the organization.

The registry fee increase proposal as presented would raise the cost of each of the first two age levels for registration by $2, with all other age levels raised by $5. Also proposed are increases for the cost of various services available from national Holstein and an increase in the cost of "set" classifications for sire evaluations. Registration fees account for about half of national Holstein's annual income, with another one-fourth of the total generated by type-evaluation fees.

The proposal for an open herdbook would designate four separate categories of registry status, with the category in which an animal falls clearly noted on its registry certificate and pedigree information.

Two categories would designate 100 percent purebred ancestry, with one category for animals whose ancestry is sourced in the herdbooks of the U.S. or Canada and the other for animals with a known purebred ancestry in other recognized international herdbooks.

Two other categories would designate animals of from zero to 99 percent purebred ancestry. One would designate animals whose lineage was North American but could not be traced to a purebred origin in either the U.S. or Canadian herdbook. The other would designate animals with an international lineage, but whose ancestry could not be traced to a purebred origin in any of the other recognized international herdbooks, and animals with a combination of North American and international lineage, but not traceable to purebreds in those herdbooks.

"An animal can never become 100 percent purebred," CEO Kerr affirmed. "They must start there."

However, concern was expressed by several in the audience that animals of less than 100 percent purebred lineage might be graded up to purebred status at some future point. Other concerns were raised that sires coming on the commercial market could carry less than 100 percent traceable purebred ancestry and thus result in offspring in the less than 100 percent purebred categories.

"The word purebred means different things to different people," noted Cope. "Europe calls 87 percent traceable ancestry cattle 'purebred.' In the future, the world will look less to lineage and more to performance."

A major Holstein policy change, such as opening the herdbook, will probably require a 75-percent, "super majority" vote, discussion leaders predicted.

In a straw vote of those attending the Forum discussion, both proposals did generate majority support. Raising registry fees, however, was a less contentious issue than that of opening the Holstein herdbook.

Miller Retires As National Holstein Classifier

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After almost 17 years as an official Holstein Classifier, on February 28, 1997, Paul E. Miller of Harrisburg, announced his retirement. A dinner was held in his honor at the Maverick Restaurant on Feb. 15 with 32 staff members and family in attendance.

Born and raised on a grade dairy farm, Miller joined the National Holstein Association in 1952, and with the financial help of his father, started his own registered herd. From 1952 until 1980, he bred over 30 Excellent cows including one Ex 96 and two Ex 95s. Also had two successful milking herd dispersals.

In 1980, he formed a partnership with his two sons who took over the dairy herd and Paul became a full time classifier.

During his years as classifier, he classified approximately 250,000 cows in many states and in South American. Some of the more notable ones were "The Lilac Cow" at Gay Pridge Farms making her Ex 96 on her first classification score. She later went Ex 97 and All American. Another cow at Gay Ridge, "The Kat Cow," he raised from Ex 92 to Ex 96. She also later went Ex 97 and All American. Another cow worth mentioning was owned by Pantom Farms "Hanover Hill TT Sally." She was classified Ex 96 by Miller and later her son bred by Pantom Farms was also scored Ex 96 by Miller. His named is Sunbuck and he is now Ex 97.

Paul Miller

Paul Miller's love for the Registered Holstein Cow will definitely linger on after retirement.

In his retirement he plans to work with breeders as a breeding consultant and do some AAA analysis work. He also plans to attend many cow shows, some as a spectator and some as an official judge.

Paul and his wife, Pat, plan to spend some time traveling and spending quality time with the family. His love for the outdoors and hunting will also receive top priority.

Food Science Extension

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Two regional dairy sanitarians with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture have retired this past year, though their positions were filled within a few months.

Two other field sanitarian positions are expected to become vacant in 1997, while a replacement is in training already to fill a job as state laboratory evaluation officer that is to be open with a 1997-anticipated retirement.

Joseph Frederick and Robert Wood have retired as regional dairy sanitarians with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. Hired were Gerald Shick of Latrobe and Ralph Kerr of Centerville.

Carol Wallace, a laboratory evaluation officer is scheduled to retire this coming year and Alec Pettyjohn, a microbiologist, is in training to take over in that position.

County extension staff and dairy farmers who have questions about state regulations should contact the nearest state sanitarian.

Calls should be made between 7:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

The chief of the PDA Bureau of Food Safety and Laboratory Services, Division of Milk Sanitation, is James Dell. His office number is (717) 787-4316.

For its purposes, PDA divides the state into seven regions.

In Region I, milk sanitarians are Terry Swasy, Cranberry, (814) 677-2002; Terry Lishka, Seward, (814) 466-6914; and Ralph Kerr, Centerville, (814) 827-3962.

gram unfolds, I believe it will increase our ability to preserve agricultural land throughout the state. Combined with Maryland's existing nationally recognized Agricultural Land Preservation Program (number one nationally with 128,000 acres now permanently preserved) Maryland will have an opportunity to continue, in a more rapid pace, its leadership in land preservation.

The administration of the Maryland Agricultural Land Preservatioin Program will continue under its existing structure. In addition, it will be an active partner in the acquisition of agricultural land preservation easements purchased with Rural Legacy funds. As an amendment to the proposed legislation, Governor Glendening has pledged $14 million in new dollars from the rural legacy fund to the Maryland Agricultural Land Preservation Foundation to meet ongoing, statewide agricultural preservation beyond the rural legacy areas. This offers a much needed monetary enhancement to our existing program for its continued success.

The net result of the passage of this important Smart Growth initiative is the creation of a Rural Legacy Program working with local governments and environmental and agricultural industry groups in a cooperative effort for the protection of the cultural, environmental and economic well-being of Maryland.

I urge strong support for the Rural Legacy Program. It is an opportunity we cannot afford to lose.

Lewis R. Riley, Secretary,

Editor,

Who will feed the people?

This is a question that needs to be asked as farms are disappearing from this country. Without the farmer, the people in this country will starve!

Talking with some people about farmers dumping milk, the response is, "It doesn't concern us because we can buy milk at the store." Well ... where does the store get their milk?

Does anyone in Washington know the cost to the farmer to produce this milk? No.

On an average it costs approximately $8.13 a day per cow just for feed (hay — $4, silage $1 and feed/mineral $3.13). The feed cost is increased if the farmer has to purchase prepared feed. This is not the only cost incurred by the farmer to produce milk. You must add labor (hired help), fuel, equipment and equipment repairs, planting and harvesting costs, breeding costs, and veterinarian costs. Sometimes the farmer is forced to take out loans and then has to repay these.

With the recent drop in milk price, the farmer will no longer be able to produce milk. On an average, the farmer makes approximately $2.24 an hour for his time and labor (the farmer labors about 14 hours a day). This is a mere pittance for a job that requires so much. The farmer will never be rich.

Family farms that have been around for generations are becoming extinct. The little farms are going under. What happens to the farmer who now has to find a job? Some are too old while others are told they have no experience. What does this do for the economy?

Our Cooperative Extension Board in Montour County is concerned about the fate of our farms and farmers.

Please take time to listen to the farmers and help them keep the beautiful farms alive in this country. We don't need our farmland developed for homes and industries. They are part of our past and our future.

Deb Alpaugh
President,
Montour County
Extension Board

Berks Holstein Tour To Bedford And Blair Counties

BERKS COUNTY — This year Berks County Holstein Club is hosting an interesting and educational tour to Bedford and Blair counties featuring new facilities, famous Holstein genetics, red and polled Holsteins as well as niche marketing. The trip is open to any person wishing to have an enjoyable day with other Holstein enthusiasts. Following is our itinerary:

Loren Woy & Family, Everett

Within the last month, the Woy family has moved into a new 6-row free-stall barn with a state-of-the-art milking center. The Center features an Universal double-10 expandable to a double-16 parlor. To maximize milker comfort, the floor of the pit is on hydraulic cylinders enabling it to be raised or lowered. The milkhouse (tank, controls and wash systems) are all located in a basement area beneath the parlor. Employing a water reservoir system, the Woys pump water during off hours into holding tanks to be used throughout the day. Feed is stored in bunker silos. The farming operation consists of 250 cows and 1,100 acres of crops and is owned and operated by Loren and his two sons, Brian and Barry. There are two full-time employees and some part-time help.

Singing Brook Farm, Imler

Singing Brook Farm is owned and operated by Obie Snider and his family. Obie has served as a director of the National Holstein Association, has been very active in the PA Holstein Association, and is currently on the Board of Trustees for Penn State University. The Singing Brook herd is home to the "Mandy" family which has produced Mascot, Marvel and numerous other bulls that have entered A1 service. Their consignment topped the National Holstein Convention Sale held in Pittsburgh in 1995. The herd consists of 180 cows housed in a 120-stall barn with the low cows residing in a loafing barn. Cows are milked in a carousel parlor. A visit to the display room off the farm office will pay tribute to the many great cows bred and developed at Singing Brook Farm. Obie concentrates his efforts on record keeping and the cropping program, while son Bruce and a herdsman care for the cattle and the flush program. The farming operation covers approximately 1,000 acres in a beautiful Bedford County valley.

Burket Falls Farm,
New Freedom

This scenic dairy farm located at the end of farm country in Blair County is owned and operated by David Burket and his family. Masters of niche marketing, the Burkets and their Polled (hornless) cattle and red or red-factored Holsteins are drawing interest from around the world, especially Europe. The 100-cow herd is housed in a stall barn with heifers in either counter-slope pens or freestalls. Several of the bulls which the Burkets are currently marketing are housed in the bull barn. This family operation consists of 450 acres, probably 600 acres if it were all laid flat! Be sure to look in the farm office to see another crop that grows and harvests great in this area!

Carl Rowser Elk Farm

This exciting farm, where Carl raises his elk, is located in the Dutch Corner area of Bedford County. His herd consists of 11 cows and yearlings and 5 bulls. All of the animals are registered by the North American Elk Breeder's Association. The elk are raised primarily for their velvet (immature antlers) which are used in Asia for medicinal purposes. Breeding stock sales and meat production also contribute to their value. Mr. Rowser's elk are kept in large pastures that serve as a natural environment to these giant deer-like animals. We will also see the work station where the elk are treated and worked by the vet. Carl will explain the breeding, bloodlines and marketing of registered elk; many aspects of which are similar to breeding registered Holsteins.

Travel Information

Perkiomen Valley Bus Company will be providing charter bus service for the farm tour with the following pick-ups:

The Information Age Comes To Dairy MAP

ROBERT TURNER
Eastern Regional Coordinator, Dairy-MAP

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Are you wondering about the "wonders" of the World Wide Web? Confused about your course on the information superhighway? Intrigued about the mysteries of the Internet? If you have a modem on your computer and access to the Internet, let the new Dairy-MAP web site be your guide to finding information.

The Dairy Management And Profitability (Dairy-MAP) program has a new web page with not just the dairy producer, but all of agriculture in mind. Designed by Rob Walker, the new web page can assist individuals and businesses in locating information in agriculture from Dairy-L to Graze-L, from Bees to Sheep, from Cows to Beef; it is all on the Dairy-MAP web pages and linking pages. Dairy-MAP used Clark Consulting International, Inc. in listing the most up to date materials in agricultural data bases. This information is free to computer users with a modem and Internet access. Information about the treatment of mastitis or animal diseases, mechanical problems with your tractor, tapping into the National Dairy Database, and much more is available through the Dairy-MAP web page with links on the Internet Superhighway of information.

The web page is designed not only for managers but also for all users interested in researching dairy and agricultural information. From the Dairy-MAP home page you can link to agricultural publications, dairy software, agricultural organizations, commercial dairy sites, dairy publications, dairy farmer home pages, fun cow stuff, computer resources, Internet resources, newspapers, search engines, Internet/web training, weather sites, agricultural software companies, and other agricultural related links and much more. Most important is the Dairy-MAP workshop schedule pages for each of the workshops being held in Pennsylvania, from Managing For Success, Financial Management, Human Resource Management, to the newest workshops being scheduled on Focus on the Future just released last week by the Dairy-MAP team.

The Information Age and web pages are very much in line with the mission statement of Dairy-MAP, which is: "To create opportunities for people in the dairy industry to learn new business management skills."

The new web pages by Dairy-MAP do just that, they make available new management technology for the collection of data to assist your daily business decisions to increase the opportunity for profitability. Try the new Dairy-MAP web pages at: http://www-das.cas.psu.edu/users/dairymap/.

Leave your comments and please check out the scheduled Dairy-MAP workshops in your area. The Information Age is available through the Dairy-MAP Home Page on the Internet Web.

discussions were in progress between the management of both organizations to develop a closer working arrangement. The hint of a merger was made then, though not held out as the explicit goal of talks.

More recently, the boards of directors of both organizations approved a merger plan, leaving the final decision of such a business move up to membership delegates.

ADC membership — through its elected delegates — is to decide on the merger on March 13, during a special delegate vote.

ADC members were to have been made directly aware of the voting procedures through a mailing by the co-op done early this week.

If ADC member-delegates approve the merger, it is to become effective on April 1.

Atlantic has been processing and packaging butter at its Mt. Holly plant in Carlilse for the Land O'Lakes brand since 1980 and has recently reported making a profit on the investment into the business arrangement.

ADC has been a growing cooperative and its members produce and market a large percentage of the milk in Pennsylvania.

For example, it grew in membership and marketing clout when it contracted several years ago to supply the milk for the Pennsylvania operations of Hershey Foods, which was moving to eliminate its direct-purchase operations from local independent producers.

Those independent suppliers were given the option of joining Atlantic and continue to help supply the Hershey demand. Some did and some didn't.

Atlantic also subcontracts for milk with smaller dairy cooperatives, such as the Mt. Joy Farmers Cooperative.

That cooperative also received a boost in membership when former direct suppliers to Hershey sought to retain a local market.

ADC has also been working with the Rodale Foundation in a Dairy Network Partnership program.

The effect of a merger between ADC and Land O'Lakes on current ADC alliances and business relationships with other cooperatives is unknown, though Laura England said Thursday that it was expected that those contracts and agreements would be maintained.

In the joint Land O'Lakes/ADC news release made this week, John Gherty, Land O'Lakes president and chief executive officer stated, "We are excited about this opportunity to maximize our butter supply close to our strongest markets while establishing a true national organization with membership on the East Coast, across the Mid West and reaching to the West Coast.

"By creating value-added markets for members and delivering cost-effective, on-farm production programs, we strengthen our entire cooperative system and become better positioned for long-term growth in both domestic and international markets."

Land O'Lakes is a Minnesota-based food and agricultural cooperative owned by farmers, ranchers and member cooperatives in 20 states. It provides agricultural inputs for nearly 1,000 member cooperatives supplying 300,000 farmers; serves more than 7,000 direct producer-members; and manufactures and markets a wide variety of food products.

ADC primarily markets raw milk. Both cooperatives handle about the same volumen of milk annually.

In a recent comparison of the two cooperatives by Dr. George Haenlein, a long-time dairy professor and columnist at University of Delaware, through its value-added marketings, Land O'Lakes was able to generate about twice as much gross income on the sale of its producers' milk than what ADC was able to gross.

Survey Needs Horse Owners To Respond

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania has been designated as a study state for a national equine health study to be conducted by the National Animal Health Monitoring System (NAHMS), a nonregulatory unit within the USDA. Veterinarians involved with the NAHMS are interested in having individuals allied with the horse industry help determine the study's focus.

The NAHMS has set up a telephone number and Internet address where individuals may respond to a short survey anytime before March 15, 1997. Those who are interested in participating by phone should call 1-800-545-8732. Callers will be asked a short series of questions regarding the priorities for the study.

There is no cost to respondents, and the input gained by the study leaders will be invaluable in setting the focus for the study. The survey is open to all horse owners and has been advertised in several equine magazines. For more information call the Harrisburg office at (717) 782-3442.

Tips For Reproductive Management

MICHAEL L. O'CONNER
Dairy, Animal
Science Extension
Penn State University

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Too often on many farms reproductive management becomes inconsistent and, as a result, conception rate declines and a high percentage of the herd is open an extended period of time.

The following are some tips for establishing a systematic approach to reproduction.

1. Institute a sound dry-cow program so that cows to calve in have proper body condition with minimal problems at calving and during early lactation.

2. Energy status during early lactation is highly correlated with the onset of ovarian function. The more negative the energy balance during the first three weeks of lactation, and the longer duration of severe energy balance, the greater will be the delay to first ovulation.

Develop a feeding program that minimizes weight loss and severe negative energy balance without overfeeding concentrates.

3. Set a goal of 70 days to first service and make this a major control point for reproductive management. Provided that postpartum problems are kept to a minimum, several well controlled studies have confirmed that conception rate and average daily milk yield were not reduced by earlier breeding.

4. Establish an aggressive and routine heat detection program. Heat detection efficiency prior to first service must be high, to obtain a reasonable average, and a narrow distribution of, days-to-first services among cows. Remember that pregnancy rate is a product of heat detection rate and conception rate. Most progress can be made by improving the accuracy and efficiency of heat detection. Earlier research demonstrated a $4 return per dollar invested to improve the rate of heat detection from 35 to 55 percent.

5. Programmed breeding may be considered. If it is difficult to dedicate time and labor for routine and effective heat detection, consider instituting a programmed breeding program using defined schedules of hormonal injections. Although heat detection is not eliminated, the onset of heat occurs in a more predictable manner and more cows are in heat simultaneously so labor can be more effectively focused on heat detection and timely insemination. Timely pregnancy examinations are critical so that cows diagnosed open can be recycled through the program quickly.

6. Set up a team using your veterinarian, nutritionist, AI representative and employees to develop a systematic approach to reproduction.

7. Monitor reproductive performance so that progress towards goals can be monitored, problems can be quickly identified, corrective actions taken, and priorities established.

Md., Va. Co-op Pays 13th Check

RESTON, Va. — Members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association Inc. recently received an additional check — on top of 12 monthly checks — for 1996 marketings representing producer shares of profits made on the sale of raw milk by the cooperative's marketing division.

According a news release this week from the cooperative, more than $4.4 million of "extra funds" were distributed in the co-op's 19th issuance of an annual 13th check.

Producers received an extra 24 cents per hundredweight in their 13th check, paid this February, according to the news release. The payment was made on more than 1.8 billion pounds of milk marketed through the cooperative in 1996.

The profit share was paid out Feb. 1. On top of that money was an extra 6 cents per hundredweight of marketing division premiums paid out during August, September, October and November last year, in order to help members offset high feed prices. The cooperative distributed $1 to members during that time, paying out a 30 cents per cwt. premium, its highest ever.

"Increased sales of Class I milk into the Southeast have been a contributing factor to this year's excellent 13th check," said George Walgrove, general manager of the cooperative. "We are pleased to be able to distribute these earnings to our members immediately. It is always important to us that we get as much money as possible to our producers as quickly as possible."

The milk marketing and processing cooperative is headquartered in Reston, Va., and markets milk for almost 1,200 dairy farmers in Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

High-quality bales from low-priced balers

Thanks to John Deere, you don't have to spend much money to get quality bales. Introducing the 446 and 546 Round Balers, two of seven new round balers from John Deere that are especially suited for the hay acreages and bale-handling needs in this region. The 446 gives you 4-foot-wide by 4-foot-high 750-pound bales, while the 546 makes 5-foot-wide by 4-foot-high 1,000-pound bales.

Perfect bales every time. Both of these economical balers feature a simple mechanical monitoring system. Quick glances in the rearview mirror guide the driving pattern by telling you how the bale is forming. Another easy-to-see gauge tells you how bale size is growing, so you'll be ready to eject the bale.

New pickups pack more hay into the bale. The standard pickup offers increased strength over previous models. Or choose the patented new MegaTooth pickup that features extra-strength teeth and three times the pick up power of other pickups. It's ideal for tough or wet crops. A wide pickup is available for the 446 Baler – perfect for scattered windrows.

Exclusive staggered, diamond-tread belts reduce both leaf loss and bale chafing. Staggered belts enclose more than 90 percent of the bale, and the tread helps build tight bales that stand firm and tall when others slouch and sag.

Choose the new John Deere baler that best fits your operation. Ask your dealer about the 446 and 546, plus five other models that build perfect bales in even bigger sizes.

Dairy MAP Human Resource Management Workshops

YORK (York Co.) — Making efficient use of human resources on the farm is a goal many farm managers share. This is easy to understand because when labor and family living costs are combined, they rival feed and debt service as significant costs of doing business on dairy farms.

The goal of the Dairy MAP human resource management module is to help managers create a productive, efficient, satisfying work environment on their farms. Participants will explore the larger picture of the labor scene across Pennsylvania and how that impacts the supply and demand of the potential farm workers. They will work together to solve a series of problems relating to the work of an example dairy farm — Hope Springs Farm.

The key to effective human resource management will be discovered through the process of solving Hope Spring's problems. Participating managers should be able to improve their own farm work environment by applying the principles learned to their own staff. Improved productivity results when roles, responsibilities and authority are clearly defined and understood. A satisfying work environment can then be maintained with open and honest communication channeled constructively in both directions between workers and managers at all levels.

Two Dairy MAP human resource workshops are planned in the area. A session will be offered in York on Wednesday, March 12 and Wednesday, March 19 at Hoss's Steak and Sea House in West York. A second session will be offered at Theo's Restaurant in Shippensburg on Thursday, March 13 and Thursday, March 20. The program starts with refreshments at 9:30 a.m. and concludes at 3:00 p.m. Cost for the workshop is $50/farm operation. Meals costs are additional and will be payable at the workshop. The Hoss's restaurant in West York is located at 2175 White Street across from the Delco Plaza off Route 74. Many agribusinesses provide scholarships for Dairy MAP workshops. Reimbursement information will be available at the workshop. Registraiton is requested on or before March 10, 1997. To register contact Tim Beck (York office telephone 717-840-7408), Roland Freund (Cumberland office telephone 717-240-6500) or Phil Wagner (Franklin office telephone 717-263-9226).

Lancaster County Tobacco Management Meeting

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — New ways of growing tobacco transplants and an in field tobacco curing system will be two of the subjects discussed at Lancaster County Tobacco Management Meetings. The meeting will be presented at three locations in Lancaster County which are scheduled for the Paradise Township Park Building on March 5 starting at 12:30 p.m., the Penn Manor High School Auditorium on March 5 starting at 7:00 p.m. and the Earl Township Municipal Building on March 6 starting at 12:30 p.m.

Are you considering a greenhouse to produce tobacco transplants but feel the cost is too high? Would you like a better way to grow tobacco plants than in the conventional bed? Dave Conrad, Maryland Extension Tobacco Specialist will be discussing a "Float Bed" system developed in Maryland. The system incorporates many of the advantages of the greenhouse but is much less expensive to build.

John Yocum, Penn State Southeast Field Research Station Manager will be discussing what's happening with Blue Mold and it's control along with other pest control problems in tobacco.

Under the new farm bill the U.S.D.A. has changed how they will be looking at and making payments for crop disasters. Bernie Morrissey from the Morrissey Insurance Agency will discuss these changes and how the new crop insurance program works.

Bob Anderson, Extension Agent will be discussing a field curing system being developed and used by tobacco growers in Tennessee.

Portions of the program will qualify for pesticide update credit. All persons interested in the production of tobacco are invited to attend one of these meetings. For more information contact Bob Anderson at the Lancaster County Extension Office, (717) 394-6851.

Penn State encourages persons with disabilities to participate in its programs and activities. If you anticipate needing any type of accommodation or have questions about the physical access provided, please contact Bob Anderson at (717) 394-6851 in advance of your participation or visit.

PA Dairy Promotion Board Elects Officers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program Commodity Marketing Board recently elected offices for the 1997-1997 term.

Richard C. Waybright, Gettysburg, will serve as chairman. Waybright is one of the owners of Mason Dixon Farms, Inc., a large Pennsylvania dairy farm.

Also elected as officers are Robert Gehman, Coopersburg, vice chairman; John Ligo, Grove City, secretary; and Raymond Diebold, Altoona, treasurer.

Other board members serving on the executive committee are Tom Croner, Berlin, Karl Kroeck, Knoxville, James Lydic, Marion Center, and Randall Meabon, Wattsburg.

"As the industry continues to grow and evolve to meet the needs of consumers, dairy promotion will lead the way in driving demand for dairy products," said Waybright at the reorganization meeting.

"The PDPP Commodity Marketing Board searches for opportunities in Pennsylvania to put dairy first in the minds of consumers. We have a dedicated group of dairy farmers that are committed to dairy promotion on behalf of all Pennsylvania farmers."

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) is the dairy farmer-funded promotion program representing dairy farmers in 33 north central and western Pennsylvania counties.

Contracting with the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East to conduct advertising, marketing, promotion and nutrition education programs on their behalf, the PDPP board oversees the dairy promotion programming conducted in their 33 county territory.

The PDPP supports the "got milk?" national advertising campaign by purchasing commercial air time in their Pennsylvania markets. "Got milk?" continues to be one of the most recognzied and decorated consumer advertising campaigns in the country. As "got milk?" partners with companies like JCPenney's and Mattel to expand marketing opportunities, "got milk?" positions milk as a must-have beverage among consumers.

To expand the "got milk?" message to more Pennsylvania consumers, PDPP sponsors several additional promotion programs. These include underwriting sponsorship of the PIAA high school athletic championships; a children's public service campaign with the Pittsburgh Steelers co-sponsored by the PA Department of Agriculture; and June Dairy Month special events and advertising with the Erie Seawolves and Williamsport Cubs minor league baseball teams.

The PDPP also supports the research and development and marketing efforts to increase fluid milk consumption with Moo Kooler™. Moo Kooler is a line of branded, 2% flavored milk packaged in a convenient, 12-ounce, recyclable, resealable plastic container.

Grange Supports Family Farm Tax Simplification Act

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In an effort to aid family farmers, the National Grange has voiced its support of The Family Farm Tax Simplification Act.

The legislation has been brought forward by Congress because of a recent Internal Revenue Service ruling stipulating that payments made under a deferred payment contract are subject to the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT). As a result, payments must be included in the taxable year in which the deferred contract was signed for the purposes of calculating the AMT. A companion Senate bill will be introduced in the opening days of the upcoming season.

The proposed legislation, sponsored by Rep. George Nethercutt (R-WA), would reaffirm that any farmer who chooses the cash basis of accounting will properly be subject to tax liability on deferred sale contracts in the year in which crop sales income is received, not the year in which the contract is signed.

Kermit W. Richardson, Master (president) of the National Grange, said, "As a result of the recent IRS ruling, countless family farmers are facing large and unexpected tax bills because they are being unfairly subjected to an AMT provision that takes away their ability to use deferred payment contracts to move their tax liability into future years."

Richardson said, "When enacted, this legislation will provide fairness and certainty in tax policy for the small and mid-sized farmer."

U.S. Senate Ag Committee Introduces Proposals

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Senate Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee Chairman Dick Lugar has introduced legislation to renew the lapsed presidential fast-track authority needed to negotiate trade agreements and knock down trade barriers.

Lugar also joined 55 members of the Senate to introduce legislation that overturns an IRS ruling that would make farmers pay taxes on income they have not yet earned.

Fast-track is the procedure Congress uses to consider and approve trade agreements, negotiated by the President. Under the system, Congress has 60 days to approve an agreement following presidential submission.

Lacking fast-track authority, many countries are reluctant to negotiate with the United States fearing that concessions they have already made could be amended by Congress, forcing further negotiations and more concessions.

"In 1996, agricultural exports reached a record of $59.8 billion. Continued growth is vital," said Lugar, a senior member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "World Commodity markets are often distorted by import barriers, export subsidies and state trading enterprises. These distortions put American farmers and agribusiness operators at a disadvantage. We must reduce trade barriers and allow our industry to supply the world's markets.

"The United States must continue to move forward in its effort to find new markets for our goods and services. We should take advantage of a favorable trade climate in South American by pursuing an agreement with Chile, which has advanced bilateral trade agreements with Canada and Mexico and has become an associate member of the Southern Cone Mercosur trading bloc.

"Before the United States can move forward, the Administration must have fast-track authority. The President must now make a case to Congress and the American people that this is a priority of his administration," Lugar said.

The bill, titled the Trade Agreement Implementation Reform Act (TAIR), allows legislation submitted under fast-track authority to contain only provisions absolutely necessary to implement an agreement.

Prior law allowed provisions "necessary and appropriate" and encouraged deals with special interests in exchange for support.

Fast-track legislation could not be amended except to delete provisions that merely offset revenue losses from tariff changes. Lugar also introduced that fast-track bill in the last Congress.

The Internal Revenue Service said last year they would expect farmers to pay tax on income in the year that a commodity contract is made, not the year in which the cash is received. This would even apply to farmers who use cash basis accounting.

"The IRS position is wrong and regrettable. It will result in farmers being hit with huge unexpected tax bills," said Lugar, an original co-sponsor of the bill.

"The use of deferred contracts has been an important tax management tool for cash basis farmers since Congress eliminated income averaging in 1986. Farmers have little or no control over the price of crops or livestock and the weather conditions under which they produce commodities. The use of deferred contracts assists them in averaging their annual income flow and the resulting tax liability," Lugar said.

"The IRS position ignores the fact that our family farmers are, by statute, expressly permitted to manage their businesses on a cash basis and that amounts received under deferred payment contracts may be handled this way," Lugar (R-Ind.) said.

The bill, known as the Family Farm Alternative Minimum Tax Relief Act of 1997, has broad bipartisan support including both the Senate majority and minority leaders.

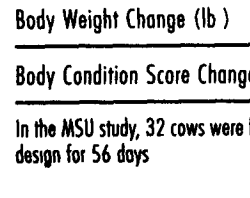
ONLY A COMPANY WITH 130 YEARS OF EXPERIENCE COULD GET MORE MILK FROM YOUR COWS IN A WEEK.

INTRODUCING FULLTIME™ FORAGE.

A REVOLUTIONARY NEW FEEDSTUFF THAT CAN TURN YOUR HERD INTO CASH COWS.

That's right, feed your dairy herd our remarkable new FullTime™ forage, and within a week, you could see results like those at Michigan State University (MSU). Cows fed Cargill's new FullTime forage hybrids on average consumed 8 percent more dry matter, resulting in 5.5 more pounds of milk per cow per day while showing improved body condition.

A Forage Like This Only Comes Around Once In A Blue Moon. There are at least two ways fiber digestibility can improve a cow's performance. One, by increasing the energy density of its diet, and the other, by increasing dry-matter intake. It's these two components working together that explain the remarkable test results with FullTime forage. You see, our new line of FullTime forages contain up to 40 percent less indigestible lignin than traditional hybrids. This means that FullTime forage rates higher in fiber digestibility. Than, in turn, contributes to the increase in dry-matter intake of nearly 4 1/2 pounds per cow per day in he MSU trial. By digesting fiber more rapidly and more completely, cows can move feed out of the rumen more quickly and make room for more feed. This translates into more energy for milk production in an optimally balanced ration and is what makes FullTime forage a nutritional breakthrough.



A Better Forage All The Way Around. No longer do you have to deal with the timing or weather issues related to hay crops. Or balance grain yield over forage quality like you do with other hybrids. With FullTime forage you get high-fiber digestibility, low lignin, improved dry-matter intake, better cow performance, and perhaps best of all, a harvest that's only once a year.

The Way To Milk More From Your Cows. The MSU tests show clearly that feeding silage made from FullTime forage can have a significant effect on a dairy farm's profitability. Even after accounting for the costs of higher dry-matter intake, the average response of 5.5 pounds of milk per cow per day priced at 14 cents per pound exceeds $150 per cow per lactation.

You Could Be Just A Week Away From Greener Pastures. The results are in. And they're remarkable. Milk production. Herd health. Even your bottom line can improve when you feed new FullTime forage from Cargill. So, why wait? See your Cargill dealer today.

All Gardens Great & Small

PRUNING FRUIT TREES

This is the first in a series of articles on pruning fruit trees . . .

Properly pruned fruit trees develop a strong, well-balanced framework that produces more fruit.

Great and small gardeners should begin pruning their fruit trees in March. Four important pruning steps will make your job easier.

First, examine the tree closely and prune off any dead branches. Ask yourself why did the branch die? This will help you develop corrective control measures during the coming growing season.

Secondly, locate and remove any broken branches. Broken branches may not be dead but any fruit they bear will cause further damage to the tree.

Thirdly, remove one- and two-year-old shoots and suckers growing up in the center of the tree. Also remove branches growing back through the tree.

Finish up by thinning out the remaining branches. Each branch should receive sunlight and air. Try to visualize what the tree will look like with a full load of leaves and fruit. The limbs will of course be bent downward. For this reason, no limb should be permitted to grow directly over another. Pruning one such limb will avoid limb rub and damage to the fruit skin from rubbing.

Prune your oldest apple trees first and move to progressively to younger trees. For very vigorous varieties, wait until after new growth starts to prune. Prune older trees more vigorously.

Young apple trees usually receive pruning later in March and April closest to bud break. Avoid overpruning — especially young trees which have not yet begun to bear. Maintain a central leader on apple trees by spreading down or thinning out those side branches that are competing with the leader. Branches that form too narrow an angle with the trunk should be removed.

Only a handful of branches should remain on a young tree. Avoid — excessive thinning out on young trees. Excessive thinning promotes additional shoot growth without any increase in flower and fruit buds.

Two types of cuts are made on fruit trees. Thinning-out cuts remove entire limbs or shoots. This type of pruning cut increases the number of flower buds produced. Heading back cuts shorten the ends of branches and encourages more shoot growth.

Avoid pruning just before expected large swings in temperature. A 30 to 40 degree change in temperature predisposes a tree to winter/frost injury.

Lastly, remove pruned branches and limbs from the orchard. Dead wood harbors disease organisms that can spread back into the tree.

Any questions regarding the above article can be addressed to Tom Becker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

Alison Littlefield Is New York State Dairy Princess

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Alison Littlefield from Watertown, N.Y., was crowned the 1997-1998 New York State Dairy Princess on February 18, at the Four Points Hotel by Sheraton, Liverpool, N.Y. Having served eight months as the Jefferson County Dairy Princess, Littlefield will devote an additional year promoting milk and dairy products in conjunction with the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. (ADADC). As state princess, Littlefield received a $1,200 scholarship and will represent ADADC at county dairy princess pageants, farm meetings, and a variety of special events. In addition, she will help train new county promoters at seminars and workshops.

Littlefield received $150 for her award-winning school presentation and $75 for being recognized as one of three scrapbook winners. Teaching children about their need for milk and dairy products, the school presentation was called "got milk?", and was presented to more than 400 people at the pageant. The 21-year-old daughter of Clarence and Sharon Littlefield, Alison grew up on a 50-cow Guernsey farm with her two older sisters.

She is a past president of the NYS Jr. Guernsey Association and was the 1995 NYS Guernsey Princess. a 10-year member of 4-H, Alison was named a NYS Dairy Food winner and delegate to the National 4-H Congress. Alison graduated from SUNY Potsdam last December with a dual degree in speech communication and elementary education. She has taught students in England and is currently a substitute teacher in Watertown.

Melissa Osgood of Bliss, N.Y., in Wyoming County was named First Alternate State Princess. She received a $700 scholarship and $150 for being named a speech winner for her school program "The Moo-ville Real Seal Olympics," which talks about the importance of dairy products and the REAL Seal. She was also recognized for her honorable mention scrapbook. Osgood is the 16-year-old daughter of Dan and Pam Osgood. She is a junior at Pioneer High School, active in volleyball and chorus. Osgood is active in 4-H, receiving many awards in public speaking, agriculture, and citizenship. She is also a Sunday School teacher and volunteers as a candy striper at her local hospital.

Lois Lewis of Great Valley, N.Y., in Cattaraugus County was selected as Second Alternate State Princess. She received a $600 scholarship and is the 16-year-old daughter of Adrian and Nancy Lewis.

She is a home-schooled senior and plans to study cosmetology at the Continental School of Beauty in the fall. Lewis' interests for the dairy industry developed from working with her neighbors on their 300-acre dairy farm.

Like the state princess, both alternate princesses will represent ADADC at county dairy princess pageants, will help train new county promoters at seminars and workshops, and will assist the state princess with various appearances throughout the state. Other finalists included Britney O'Connor, Chateaugay, N.Y., Tina Ratulowski, Bergen, N.Y., Lee Ann Schwope, Pine Bush, N.Y. and Amy Swezey, Fort Ann, N.Y.

Thirty county dairy princesses competed in the state pageant, vying for the title relinquished by reigning princess Kelly West from Varysburg, N.Y. The judges were looking for the young women who most effectively promote milk and dairy products, based on a personal interview, two adult speeches, (impromptu and prepared), elementary school presentation, and informal interaction with others. Judges evaluated the contestants on their communication skills, knowledge of milk and dairy products, poise, and personality.

Overall judges were Melinda Johnson, owner of Hem-View Holsteins and fashion image consultant from Warren, Pa.; Randall Sawyer, public information officer with the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets in Albany, N.Y.; and Rebecca Sonnen, program director for the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association in Towson, Md.

In addition to Littlefield and Osgood, Nicohl Merrill of Seneca Falls, N.Y., in Seneca County, received $150 for her award-winning speech entitled "Only You," an adult speech about the importance of calcium from dairy products. Honorable mention speech presentations were given to Tina Ratulowski, Bergen, N.Y., Katie Cody, Cazenovia, N.Y., Jessica Brock, Melrose, N.Y., Rose Howland, Candor, N.Y., and Amy Swezey, Fort Ann, N.Y.

Judges evaluated each 10-minute presentation on content, speaking ability, and appearance. Speech judges were Bruce Button, general manager of Lee Publications, Inc. in Palatine Bridge, N.Y.; Jonelle Smith, 1995-96 New York State Dairy Princess from Cincinnatus, N.Y.; and Arlene Wilbur, assistant program director for the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. from LeRaysville, Pa.

Each contestant created a dairy promotion scrapbook for competition. In addition to Littlefield, Valcia holden of Springwater, N.Y., in Livingston County, and Jana Schenck of Greenwood, N.Y., in Steuben County were awarded $75 for their award-winning scrapbooks. In addition to Osgood, honorable mention scrapbooks were Jennifer Molnar of Tully, N.Y., in Onondaga County;

Eat For Health

Good nutrition means eating a well balanced diet from all the food groups. While "junk food," can be incorporated into a balanced diet, nutritious refers more to basic foods made without a lot of empty calories.

Food may be high calorie and nutritious if it is what is called a nutrient-dense food. That means it offers a large percentage of vitamins and minerals in comparison to the calories.

Variety is the key to a balanced health-promoting diet, for no one food contains all the nutrients needed. Only by eating a wide variety of foods from different categories is it possible for the body to receive the more than 50 nutrients that it needs daily.

CHICKEN WITH PICANTE BLACK BEAN SAUCE

Prep Time: 10 minutes
Cook Time: 35 minutes

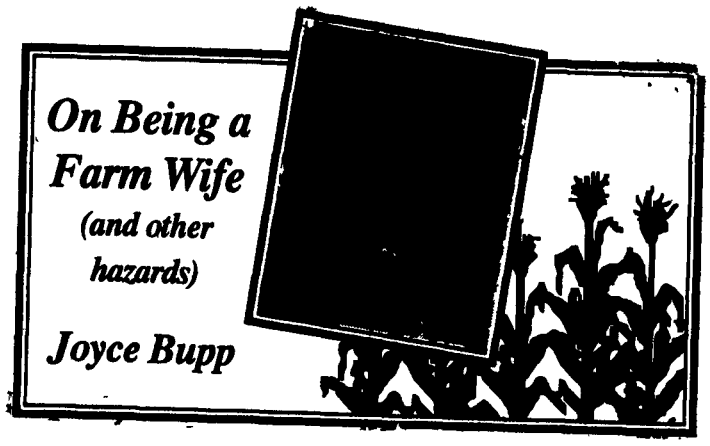
2 teaspoons ground cumin
½ teaspoon garlic powder
6 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves (about 1½ pounds)
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
⅔ cup PACE Picante Sauce
½ cup diced green or red pepper
1 can (about 8 ounces) whole kernel corn, drained
1 can (about 16 ounces) black beans, drained
2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro

1. Mix 1 teaspoon cumin and garlic powder. Sprinkle both sides of chicken with cumin mixture.

2. In medium skillet over medium-high heat, heat oil. Add chicken in 2 batches and cook ten minutes or until browned. Set chicken aside.

3. Add picante sauce, remaining cumin, pepper, corn and beans. Heat to a boil. Return chicken to pan. Reduce heat to low. Cover and cook ten minutes or until chicken is no longer pink. Sprinkle with cilantro.

Serves 6.



Just look at this floor.

You'd think a few of the cows have been detouring through the kitchen on their way to the barn or that we have a dozen kids tracking in and out of this house.

We have muddy tracks. We have bits of hay and straw. We have assorted sizes of gravel. We have tiny bits of paper, a random pin or two, several pieces of cat food (guess which kid did that). Assorted dust balls, miscellaneous dirt and mushy dark bits which — without even checking — will assuredly carry the same scent as the scrapings from the feedlot.

And I just ran the vacuum cleaner a day or so ago.'

"I don't know where all this dirt comes from," I grumbled to The Farmer in passing, as I steered toward the door, herding a couple handfuls of the daily floor accumulation toward the outside with the broom.

He offered a true dirt-farmer explanation: "It's called topsoil retention."

Now, he has always been a firm believer in soil conservation. And, like many of our neighbors, we have installed numerous improvement practices in cooperation, with soil conservation agencies.

There are terraces and grassed waterways engineered into our sloping hillsides. The fields curve around those hillsides in contour-style planting, to hold the soil and slow runoff. We practice minimum and no-tillage for much of our crops plantings, keep a regular crops rotation program and apply manure, fertilizer, and lime as much as possible in accordance with soil samples.

A fishpone is now located where our son's hogs once wallowed in hog heaven along a small portion of the creek just below the springhouse. The stream exits it for another hundred yards or so underground through the meadow below, to allow for equipment access to feeding areas behind the barns without tearing up the sod.

A wide, long, stoned waterway slows runoff from the Interstate, runoff that once ripped through the meadow and left long gouges behind in the soil, growing deeper with each heavy storm. And a spring site improvement, which diverts a pasture spring watering source into a drinking trough and fences off the cattle's former access to the ground source of the water, is nearly finished.

Farmers believe in conservation. Farmers believe in retaining topsoil.

But on the kitchen floor? I don't remember seeing that spelled out in any of the conservation management plans I've ever seen.

But, gee, it's a heck of an excuse for a dirty floor.

"Please don't pay any attention to the dirt you see about my kitchen floor," we farm wives could assure guests, with a look of complete sincerity. "It's a new topsoil retention program we're experimenting with in conjunction, we practice minimum-sweeping, to help hold down dust fallout through the rest of the house."

Twenty years of wear and tear on our wood-pattern, inlaid linoleum flooring has shredded the most heavily used pathways and demands replacement. The pattern has camouflaged the "topsoil" very well over the years, and I'd like to reinstall the same thing. Except that it is no longer available. Whites, lights, and plain dark colors are out of the question, since they'll just showcase the daily accumulation of droppings.

So, when I start dumping samples of kitchen floor sweepings on potential patterns to assess how well the "topsoil" fades into the pattern, it would be helpful if I could explain to the floor covering salespeople that it's all part of an agriculture conservation management plan.

Maybe the folks at Soil Conservation would consider this as a new program?

My address book is beginning to look quite worn. Each month I get it out of the drawer to put birthdays and anniversaries on the calendar. Some months make me sad as there I see listed several people who no longer live.

February was a sparse month compared to March. In fact March has so many names that they are written two to one line. Records get complicated when cousins divorce and then remarry. Sometimes, I refer to this little blue book just to be sure how old a grandchild is this year. Only two of our grandchildren are in their teens as most are much younger.

I've just finished reading a historical novel "Legacy" by James A. Michener. Some people can read several books a week. I'm glad to finish several in a year's time. I do like to read but always seem to find something more worthwhile to do.

Just now I'm helping to teach a class on braiding rugs. Over the last 15 years, I've made quite a few rugs. Many of mine are simply made of available wool material. Therefore, some colors do not match as well as they should. But, the grandchildren can usually find one that they like. Then they will have something to remember me by as I'm hoping they will last a long time.

My husband must think that spring is on the way as he has started cabbage and broccoli in a new plant table that he made for himself. It is a large table with long legs and fluorescent lamps overhead. For a bit I had hoped that he was making the table for me to transplant flowers. But, I was disappointed and so I'll wait a while longer as I do not like bending over our back porch in the fall.

ANSWER — Irene Martin, Selinsgrove, wanted a recipe for chocolate fudge using mostly confectioner's sugar. Thanks to a Lititz reader, and to Mrs. Daniel Yoder of Lewistown, for sending recipes.

Fudge

1 box confectioners' sugar
½ cup cocoa
4 tablespoon milk
¾ stick butter
Vanilla

Combine all ingredients and cook in double boiler until mixture melts. Pour into pan and cool.

The Jacob Tice family from Panama are vacationing in Grantsville, Md. They are Jonathan and Joseph, the pet Toby, Salome and mother, Marlene. Jacob, a dairy farmer stayed in Panama.

Salome "Sally" Tice is from Panama and is visiting her grandmother Salome Yoder in Grantsville, Md. Her favorite spot when reading, is a rocker by the windows.

Panama, Pennsylvania, Maryland Are All Home For Tice Children

Computer games at their uncle's house in Grantsville, Md. are very entertaining for brothers Jonathan and Joseph (foreground) Tice. The boys are on a long vacation from life in Panama, Central America. They and their mother and sister will return there on Feb. 25.

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

GRANTSVILLE (Garrett Co., Md.) — Panama in Central America has been home to Salome, Jonathan, and Joseph Tice, for almost seven years.

They used to live in Somerset County, Pennsylvania. Then the farm their parents owned was sold so they lived for awhile near Grantsville, Maryland. After that the family moved to Panama and began farming there.

Their parents are Jacob and Marlene Tice.

When it is wintertime in the north, people in Panama are having their summer season. So all the children have school vacation.

That is why Salome (nicknamed Sally) and her brothers, and her mother can spend two months with relatives whom they seldom see. On February 25 they will fly back to be with their father.

Mr. Tice stayed in Panama. He milks lots of cows and is the boss of seven workers who help him.

Sally is 15 and very pretty. Jonathan is 12 and very tall. Joseph is 10 and very talkative.

"Sally always has her head in a book," says Joseph.

This is true. Sally and her mother are like bookworms. They just love to read. Sally says her favorite kind of book is the mystery.

Unlike most kids here, Sally doesn't have a lending library near her to borrow the latest books.

"My hobby is fishing," says Joseph."

Jonathan, too, enjoys fishing. He isn't fast enough to fish the way he has seen the locals do it.

"This is how the locals fish," he explained. "They put on a snorkel mask (goggles); they go under the water with a machete (knife); they see a fish and take a quick move and cut it. They put their head up from the water and throw it to the person on the shore and that person cleans it."

Then the one with the machete goes down again for another fish.

The boys find worms to bait their fishing lines.

They can go swimming often. All year long, even in the winter, Panama stays warm. Winter is the rainy season.

"In winter there's lots of rain," says Sally. "I get tired of rain, especially when I want to go swimming," she says.

Spanish is the language spoken in Panama. The Tice children speak it and understand it as well as they do English. They also understand Pennsylvania Dutch, Jonathan said.

In the town of Concepcion, the children attend schools run by the Seventh Day Adventists. Their mother said the schools are excellent.

Joseph agrees to wear his shoes to go to school, but he would rather go barefoot all the time.

"When we are out of school we feed calves," says Joseph. He says they also have a mare and a colt.

"We have cows in pasture year 'round," Jonathan said. "A person has to round up the cows, milk them and put feed in troughs," he said. Before they are milked the cows stay in a holding area.

It is easy for people in the country to go to town because every 15 minutes there is a bus going by. Their parents let the children go on the bus by twos, not alone.

When they ride the bus to town, it costs less — only 25 cents, if they are wearing school uniforms. Riding the bus costs more money for people wearing regular clothes.

There is no television in their home. Many programs are not wholesome to watch so the Tices do other things for fun.

"In some ways I'm glad we don't have television," says Sally, "Because I wouldn't have time to do all the other things I do. But sometimes I wish we did have it because life gets so boring."

Panama is a little country between the Atlantic Ocean and the Pacific Ocean. Salome, Jonathan and Joseph like swimmin in the Pacific waters better than in those of the Atlantic Ocean.

Jonathan says: "The Atlantic is further. It isn't as comfortable to swim there because of coral and stuff like that."

"From the highest peak in Panama, on a clear day," said Joseph, "You can see both oceans."

A volcano named "Volcan Baru" is also on the mountain where they live. Volcan Baru has not erupted for many, many, many years. The people believe it won't erupt again.

There are no other kids their own ages for the Tices to play with when they are at home. Sometimes the adults joined them to play softball or volleyball.

"Someone hit the softball and it went into the pasture and they couldn't find it," said Jonathan.

After that, their dad bought a volleyball net for them.

Jonathan has enjoyed playing computer games on his Uncle Joe Yoder's computer. Mr. Yoder is also a farmer.

His mother suggested to Uncle Joe that Jonathan should do barn chores during vacation to earn time for computer games. She wans't sure that Uncle Joe followed her advice.

Vacation for Salome has meant having new books to read.

Joseph enjoyed the good food at other people's houses, when the family was invited out for meals, he said.

In Panama people eat rice and beans almost every day. The Tices raise a steer for their own meat.

"When we get back," said Joseph, "We're gonna' have to butcher a steer, break the colt, and go to school."

They enjoy flying in a big jet airplane. It will take about four hours to fly to Panama from the east coast. When they land in Panama City, they will drive eight more hours to reach their home.

Mentoring Program Matches Students With Agriculturists

DANIELLE WILSON
Special Correspondent
LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Fifty-one-year-old Marvin Sauder is back in school. He is neither student or teacher, but is part of the newly formed mentoring program of the Cloister FFA.

The mentoring program is the brainchild of Mrs. Jodi Brown and Mr. Ernest Orr, both FFA advisors. Structured to fit into the Supervised Agricultural Experience Program (SAE), a required year-round project, the mentoring program pairs each student with an adult who has experience in the field the student is pursuing.

Brown said, "To my knowledge, we are the only FFA chapter with a mentoring program."

Members of the Ephrata Area Young Farmers Association volunteered as mentors. In October, students met mentors for the first time when they held a mentor night.

After the first meeting, students worked on an approved practice and budget plan. On it, students listed projected cost and time requirements.

These plans were reviewed by mentors at the next meeting. In some cases, students were advised that the costs were unrealistic and adjustments needed to be made. Mentors also pointed out details that students overlooked.

Most people assume that FFA students are from farm background, but many students live in town or in the suburbs where large animal projects and crop harvesting is impossible. These students pursue projects such as breeding rodents, fishing worms, or home improvements.

Ideally a student should be matched with a mentor who has experience in the same area that the student is pursuing. However, this is not always possible.

While a mentor might not have experience in breeding rodents, Brown said that the basic concepts and record keeping of buying breeding stock, feeding, and selling the offspring are adaptable from breed to breed.

"Your role is to act as advisor, look over the student's plans, ask questions, and evaluate the student's work," Brown instructed mentors.

In some instances, mentors have more contact with students. Andrea Bender made arrangements to garden at her mentor's (Mary Schantz's) home. In most cases, students will not be visiting their mentors' homes, but the amount of interaction is left to the discretion of the mentor.

Through the SAE projects, students have the opportunity to earn awards and make money if their projects are successful. Incentives for mentors are not monetary but many mentors expressed the sentiments of Ephrata dairy farmer Marvin Sauder, who said, "My two daughters benefited from raising horses. Although it's an expensive hobby with no profit, they got a lot of pleasure out of horses. Now that my daughters are grown, I'm still interested in kids and thought maybe I could help with the mentoring program."

After the first two meetings, Sauder is enthusiastic about the mentoring program.

"I was really impressed with how much my student knew and how realistic her budget is," he said.

Some unexpected links arose from the mentoring relationships. In Sauder's case, he discovered that the horse his daughter sold when she went to college was the same one that his mentoring student rode for horse lessons.

"She reminds me so much of my daughter. It's fun to be a participant," he said.

In some cases, mentors see themselves as parental influences. Tom Bollinger said to a student, "I used to tell my sons and I'll tell you. You learn the most by watching how something is done."

This is the second year for the program. Brown said that 30 years ago, ag classes were much smaller and centered on traditional agricultural projects. With larger classes and 15 diverse projects, mentors can help fill the gap that Brown and Orr do not have time to oversee.

This is the second year for the mentoring program. Previous participants were asked their opinions on how the program could be improved. Problems that surfaced during the first year have been addressed and Brown expects the program to run more smoothly.

One of the most prevalent problems last year was communication between mentor and student. Wrong phone numbers and hesitancy about what was expected of participants hindered involvement. This was eased this year by Brown iniatiating face-to-face meetings between mentors and students.

Mentor Mike Brubaker emphasized that students needed to see the relationship between their projects and their career goals.

"Perhaps they won't raise rodents as a career. But they can transfer the knowledge they gained in starting and finishing a project. And, this should be pointed out to them," Brubaker said.

Participants in this year's program will be expected to help next year's program's users.

Brandy Good shows her projected budget to mentor Marvin Sauder.

FFA advisor Jodi Brown discusses the program with a mentor.

These are some of the 30 mentors who work with 45 participating FFA students in the mentoring program established by the Cloister FFA in Ephrata.

Household Maintenance Tips To Make The Job Easier

Cleaning needs around the home can be helped by having a routine.

Kitchen soils are often related to grease and food, so these surfaces need to be sanitized to reduce the spread of food-related bacteria. Wash surfaces with hot, soapy water first. To sanitize hard, nonporous surfaces like porcelain sinks or countertops, mix one tablespoon liquid bleach in one gal- spray bottle may be easier. But, for walls and floors, the cleaning lon of water. Wipe on the surface, keeping the surface wet for at least two minutes. Allow to air dry with no rinsing. For porous surfaces like wooden cutting boards, mix three tablespoons liquid bleach with one gallon of water. Again, keep the surface wet for at least two minutes. Rinse and wipe dry or let air dry.

For a disinfecting solution, mix ⅓ cup liquid bleach with one gallon of water and repeat the process from these! For countertops, a solution needs to be mixed in a pail for efficiency. To prevent streak marks on large vertical areas, start from the bottom and work up, overlapping areas as you clean in a circular motion.

Use a small foam paint brush to clean those tight spaces between cabinets or under applicances. Keep the brush for this purpose only! If the countertop is textured, try a soft vegetable brush for cleaning.

Clean microwave and oven spills when they happen so they don't get baked on and harden. Make sure the surface is cool before cleaning the top of the range.

Sinks really get a workout and need daily attention. Use a nonabrasive, all purpose cleaner. Porcelain surfaces and stainless steel should be disinfected.

Bathrooms are where the cleaning challenges have many surfaces: chrome, brass, glass, porcelain, and fiberglass.

Keep shower doors and curtains open after use to air dry and prevent a build-up of mildew. To remove mildew, use liquid bleach solution to remove stains (⅓ cup bleach to one gallon of water). Wear gloves to protect hands while using this solution. Warning — never mix bleach with other cleaning products!

To clean the sink, faucets, tub, or shower, wash with soapy cloth or sponge. Use baking soda and non-scratch pad for stubborn marks. Rinse with clear water.

For toilet bowls, use an all purpose commercial cleaner or mix three tablespoons washing soda per quart of warm water. Washing soda is available in the laundry section of the grocery store near the dry bleach. Use a long-handle brush to clean the bowl, rim, and as far into the trap as possible. Do not mix different types of toilet bowl cleaners together! Remove an in-tank cleaner and flush the toilet before using another type of cleaner in the bowl.

Ceramic tile is easily scratched. Use a nonabrasive, all-purpose cleaner for surface care.

Other surfaces around the home require your attention as well. For glass surfaces, use a soft cloth. Spray cleaner directly on the cloth, then clean the surface. For windows, use a soft toothbrush to clean corners.

Although painted surfaces (walls and woodwork) are usually washable, test the cleaning solution in an area where it will not be seen first, especially if the surface is recently painted. Use a nonabrasive, all purpose cleaner or wood cleaner.

Here are a few hints to help you be less hassled as you go about your chores at home:

- Keep equipment in good working order.
- Store supplies in convenient locations. If you have to search, you probably won't use it.
- Carry a basket of suppliles with you when you clean. Load it with soft cloths, sponges, foam brush, vegetable brush, and assortment of cleaning products.
- Sort our your cleaning supplies regularly.

To clean at a safe working height, have a stable stepladder or stool which will safely help you get to hard to reach areas.

The wear and tear from soil will be reduced by a carefully planned routing.

Choosing an MF 200 Series tractor is no guarantee your flower garden will grow to over 100 acres. And that you'll be potting as many as 40,000 plants a day like Stacy's Inc., of York, SC.

Farm Couple Combine In Bridal Ceremony

Duane Sauder places his new bride in a John Deere 780 tractor for the ride from the church ceremony to the bridal reception on Feb. 22. Both bride and groom are known in farming circles. For many years, Tina Umbrell of Elizabethtown showed hogs. Since high school graduation, she worked part time on the her parents', Dennis and Linda Umbrell's farm, where they raise cattle and hogs and farm 330 acres, and as a floral designer. Duane grew up on a hog farm owned by his parents Glen and Shirley Sauder in Manheim. Since graduation, Duane does custom combining for Dave Hernley and also crop farms on his own and does custom hauling. Last Call For Free Credit Reports

RUTGERS, N.J. — For the past five years, consumers have been able to check their credit reports, free of charge, from a major credit reporting bureau. This service has been available since May 1, 1992 from Experian (formerly TRW), one of the "big three" credit reporting agencies nationwide.

Consumer advocates have long recommended checking your credit file for a number of reasons: first, it was free from Experian and second — and most importantly — it has been shown that errors are common in credit reports. One study that as many as half of all credit files contain errors. Checking your file before applying for a big loan (e.g., mortgage, care loan) can head off potential problems caused by inaccuracies.

Unfortunately, the "free ride" for credit reports is about to end. It was recently announced that Experian will discontinue providing free reports on March 1. After next month, the charge for Experian reports will be similar to that of the other two large credit reporting agencies, Trans Union and Equifax. Both charge $8 for a credit report, or double that amount if you order "his or hers" reports for a couple. This is the maximum price that can be charged according to federal law.

The only way a free report can be obtained from Trans Union and Equifax — and soon Experian — is to be rejected by a creditor (e.g., credit card issuers, bank). Your rejection letter, called an "adverse action notification" in the trade, must list the name and address of the credit bureau from which the creditor obtained their data. "Rejected" consumers then have 60 days from the date of this letter (save it for reference) to request a free copy of their report.

Make it a point to contact Experian this month while the free offer policy is still in effect. They can be reached at 1-800-682-7654 or by mail at P.O. Box 8030, Layton, UT 84041-8030. Copies of forms to request your credit file are available through Rutgers Cooperative Extension. Simply send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to obtain a copy. Our mailing address is 4 Gauntt Place, Flemington, NJ 08822.

Ordering a credit report, whether it's free or costs $8 requires specific information. This is necessary to reduce the incidence of fraud (e.g., mortal enemies ordering each other's credit reports). You'll need to list your name and address and any previous addresses during the past five years. Also required is your marital status, date of birth, and Social Security number and a photocopy of your driver's license or utility bill with your name and address on it.

While you're reviewing free reports, call 1-800-772-1213 to obtain a free Social Security benefits analysis. This, too, should be regularly checked for errors. Computerized reports are only as good as the people who create them. Mistakes can and do happen. Generally, the longer you wait to catch an error, the greater the hassle. Early detection is the key to financial sanity.

Chocolate Chip Calculation Challenge

(NAPS) — What do you get when you divide 1,000 chocolate chips by the number of cookies in the bag?

According to Bill Nye, host of the PBS and nationally syndicated Disney Presents Bill Nye The Science Guy, "You've got a math task you can really sink your teeth into."

Nye should know. He's the celebrity judge of the 1,000 Chips in Chips Ahoy! Challenge and he is asking for the most creative ways to prove that 1,000 chips are actually packed into every 18-ounce bag of the cookies.

There are a number of mouth-watering prizes for the winners, including $25,000 in scholarships.

Contestants can send in essays or videos showcasing their most ingenious ways of proving the "1,000 chips in every bag" claim.

In October, 1997, at The Museum of Science in Boston, three finalists from each age category (9 and under, 10-13, 14-18 and 19 and older) will demonstrate their creative counting methods. Judges will include Nye and a select group of math teachers and professors.

According to Nabisco Business Director Vicki Carey, this chip counting concept is not new. "We've received hundreds of letters from teachers across the country who are already using the 1,000 chips in every bag claim to teach students mathematics."

Teachers and math fans can learn more about the contest by checking out the Chips Ahoy! web site at http://www.chipsahoy.com or by writing to Chips Ahoy! Challenge, P.O. Box 8122, Easton, MD 21606-8122. Entries must be postmarked by August 15, 1997. Semifinalists will be announced on September 15, 1997.

In addition to contest information, the Chips Ahoy! Web Site features a special component called: "The Teacher's Corner," which includes a page for teachers to post lesson plans for other teachers and students to borrow. The site also features a 3-D rendered lab, a game for students, fun facts about Chips Ahoy!, and links to Bill Nye The Science Guy's Web site (http://nyelabs.kcts.org) and the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics site (http://www.nctm.org).

Cumberland County Extension Reports Challenging Year

BETH MILLER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

HUNTSDALE (Cumberland Co.) — When the Cumberland County Cooperative Extension held its 80th annual meeting at the Penn Township Fire Hall here recently, the message was clear: The extension had had another very good year.

It also was a challenging year, one filled with weather problems and sometimes with danger.

As noted in the extension's annual report, the toughest times in 1996 were filled with snow.

"Heavy snows caused several farm structures to collapse," the report states. "Extension's role included helping find alternative facilities for herds of milking cows, assisting in deciding what structures could be salvaged, providing assistance for rebuilding and cautioning the farming community of the many dangers that needed to be coped with during the winter storms."

Last winter's snows seemed like a distant memory; however, as the association members chowed down a turkey dinner and listened as the extension's 1996 accomplishments were outlined.

Speakers included Jennifer Beck and Michelle Cornman, who were representatives to the 4-H National Congress; Regional Farm Management Agent Roland Freund; and Millard Ilgenfritz and Lucie DeFrance, who outlined the Master Gardener Program.

The Master Gardener Class of 1995, which completed its volunteer requirement last year, also was introduced.

Members of that class are Linda Becker, Marsha Burkett, Martin Christopher, Amy Cronin, Julie D'Angelo, Lucie DeFrance, Dennis Derr, Louise Hitchcock, Patricia Hoover, Judith Marshall, Rebecca Probst, Deborah Puskar, Linda Rosenberry, Lucille Schafer, Susan Skender, and Anne Springer.

Also during 1996, one of the county's agents, Laura Watts, became the first woman to become president of the Pennsylvania Association of County Agricultural Agents, and the chief agent, Duane Duncan, was re-elected as secretary of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Other new programs saw the Master Gardeners start an intergenerational gardening club to benefit residents of the county nursing home, the beginning of a 4-H summer sewing club, and a Farm Safety Day Camp held in conjunction with the county Ag Expo.

Receiving a 20-year service award was Mae Hemminger, center. Presenting the award at left is Earl Keller and Nancy Besch, right, both Cumberland County Commissioners.

Statistics for extension operations show 1996 was a busy year, even without those nasty blizzards.

The office handled 4,114 calls, 4,808 visits, and agents held 838 meetings on various topics that were attended by 26,485 people.

The Dairy Herd Improvement Association for the county logged 102 members and an enrollment of 7,116 cows.

There were 125 4-H adult volunteer members who supervised programs involving 1,870 club members who produced 2,851 projects. The most popular project theme by far was embryology, which generated 1,111 projects, compared to the 391 for the second place theme, Meet the Plant.

The business segment of the annual meeting saw the re-election of the association's officers for 1997.

Roy Snoke received another term as president, Gayle Fry was re-elected vice president, and Cheryl Barrick was picked for another term as secretary.

Berks County Seeks Dairy Princess Contestants

Nutrition Workshop

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — March is National Nutrition Month. To celebrate, Penn State Cooperative Extension in Chester County, Government Services Center, 601 Westtown Road, Suite 370, West Chester, is providing a nutrition program on Friday, March 7, 10 a.m.-noon.

GEHL Scavenger® Manure Spreaders

Several In Stock!

In Stock at Binkley & Hurst

THE BEST JUST GOT BETTER!

Better Performance. Gehl Scavenger®, the original V-tank spreader, has built a well-deserved reputation for delivering unmatched performance in a wide variety of materials. The new Scavenger takes that performance to the next level with even better spreading patterns in the toughest heavily-bedded manures

Increased Durability. Not only has the new Scavenger been designed to out-perform all other V-tank spreaders, but the main drive system components have been beefed up for extra durability and increased dependability.

Why Is Scavenger the Best? One big reason is the unique new round-core auger. This auger features segmented paddles grouped in a spiral pattern. This flighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading. The paddles are precisely positioned to deliver more uniform feeding to the discharge expeller. This exceptional design breaks up and blends all types of manure.

The auger is hydraulically powered both up and down (unlike competitive units that use springs, gravity or fixed augers). This design provides more control to chop through bridged material or pwer down through heavy loads.

Outstanding Application Control. Gehl's proven Varilo discharge system has been made even better. It's 33 percent wider on the Model 1315. On all new models the expeller assembly has been significantly strengthened. New square-tooth expeller paddles spread smoothy and evenly. You choose the rate you want, from heavy spring-time spreading to light top-dressing. With Scavenger you have complete control right at your fingertips

Scavenger Is Simply Better. The Gehl Scavenger is a simple spreader. It's solid and durable with sealed, welded tank construction and a full length channel steel sub-frame. Every Scavenger is built to deliver top performance year after year.

Your Gehl Dealer can show you why the new Scavenger V-tank spreader is still the best.

KRAUSE CONSERVATION TILLAGE

FINISH TILLAGE SYSTEMS

ONE PASS Tillage is REALITY

6150 XT LANDSMAN

Combines Primary & Secondary Tillage with Seedbed Finishing

6300 LANDSTAR

Heavy Residue does not stop this Machine

Both Machines feature Krause's "2-Piece K-tine" - 180 pound point load - and/or the XT270 Shank - 270 pound point load - in combinations that till, and level the soil so that you are ready to plant after one pass. The LANDSTAR is designed to handle heavy crop residue without disking or shredding first. The trash moves on through. The secret to the finished seedbed is on the back - combination of rolling baskets and heavy-duty 16" spring tines level the ground and incorporate any trash that's present.

High-Residue FIELD CULTIVATORS

KRAUSE invented HEAVY-DUTY

2-Piece K-Tine provide superior 25" clearance for trash flow.

Self-leveling tongue automatically levels the unit when changing depth.

5 Rows of Shanks - 125" front to back.

The 4200HR Field Cultivator is the Conservation Leader

JAMESWAY

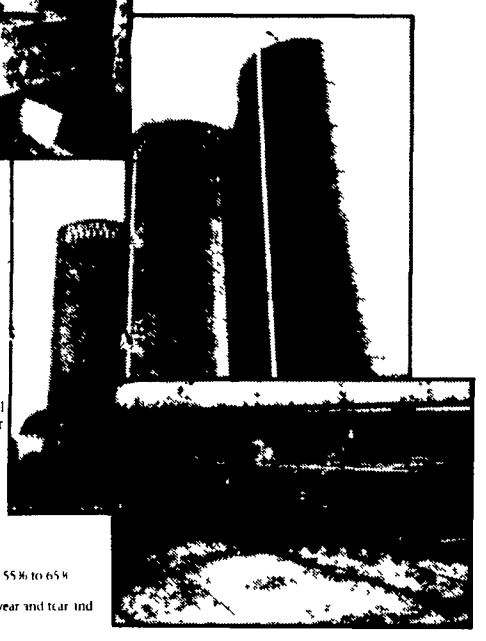
BIG JIM® Quantum™ SYSTEM

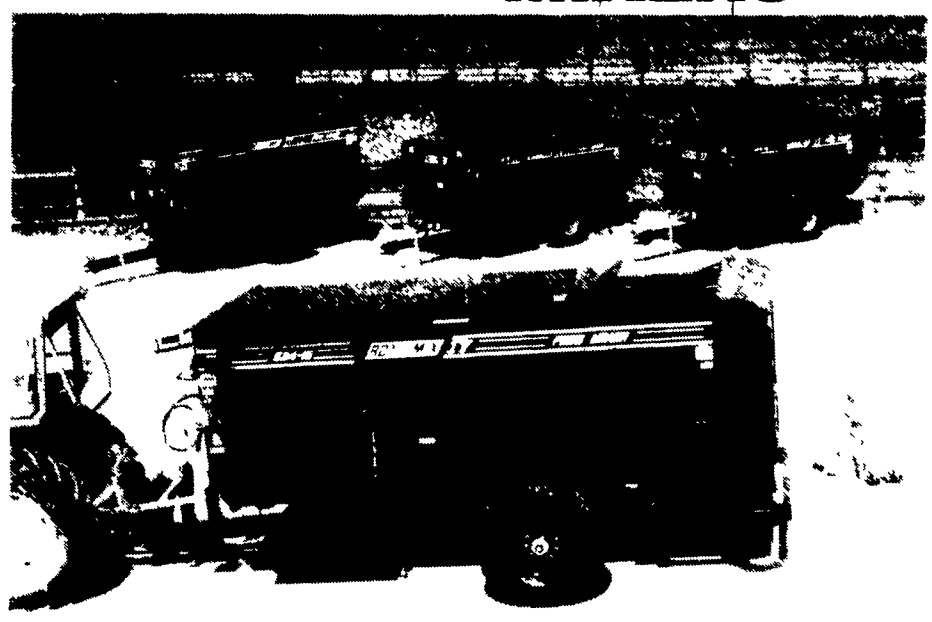
FOR CONVENTIONAL SILOS AND BOTTOM UNLOADING SILO CONVERSION SYSTEMS (B.U.C.S.)



Big Jim QUANTUM™ is a totally redesigned heavy-duty system that offers the best features of both Jamesway's Big Jim and B.U.C.S.® unloading systems plus a whole lot more. Now no matter what type of forage silo you own – conventional or oxygen limited – you can look to the future with a system that truly handles big capacity and fast feeding better than any unloader top or bottom. A system that's easy to own with no doors to change or dirty chutes to climb. A system that makes it easy for you to control ration feeding. And a system that puts your tower silo investment to its best use far better than any type of bunker silo. With Big Jim QUANTUM you get

- FASTER FEED UNLOADING – up to 35 tons per hour or up to 1,166 pounds per minute
- HIGHER SILO CAPACITY – pack up to 35% more forage into your silo
- GREATER FEED VALUE – unsile forage between 55% to 65% moisture content
- EASIER MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR – less wear and tear. And components are accessible.

MIXERS



The ROTO-MIX professionals know that quality feed means increased consumption, therefore, higher production levels. With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling action mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

Nothing robs a ration of nutritional value more than fines. Conventional auger mixers use pressure to move the feed through the mixing chamber, thus crushing the feed and creating fines. But the ROTO-MIX patented mixing system uses a rotor to gently lift the feed past the wedging point of the lower side auger, keeping fines to a minimum and reducing nutritional loss.

Even the most nutritious ration is effective only if the cattle eat the complete ration. Improperly mixed feed allows the cattle to "nose out" what they don't want, disrupting the balance of nutrients. But the ROTO-MIX end-to-end...side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

Registration is limited to about 300 people. The registration fee before Feb. 20 is $65 conferee and $35 guest (2 days), and $45 conferee and $20 guest (1 day). After Feb. 20 fees increased to $85 conferee and $45 guest (2 days), and $55 conferee and $25 guest (1 day). The fees include lunch for each day and conferenece proceedings. For lodging reservations, call the Embers at 1-800-692-7315 before February 20 and indicate that you will be attending the grazing conference.

To make reservations, make checks payable to Agri Extension Special Fund and send to Grazing Research and Education Center, 116 ASI, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802-3504.

Featured speakers for this year's conference are Bryan Strzelec from Piedmont Dairy in Florida and Ann Clark from Guelph, Ontario. Strzelec will discuss Piedmont Dairy's experience with grazing large herds: the transition, economics, environment, and heat stress. Clark will discuss meat production from pastured beef and dairy and making the grade with beef on pasture.

On Wednesday, other topics include economics of grazing, paddock layout, fencing and watering systems, manure management/pasture fertility, where you get pasture information, and management considerations for grazing larger herds. Two different panels will include eight producers discussing personal experiences in managing heat stress and managing of larger herds with grazing.

On Thursday, Ann Clark will be featured twice on the program. Other featured topics include reproductive management for grazing systems, charging your fencing systems, the basics of pasture agronomics, supplemental feeding strategies for dairy cows, and feed budgeting and planning on pasture.

A trade show will include exhibits from several companies which will have up-to-date information on new techniques.

Farm Directories Offer Free Advertising For Farmers

CHARLOTTE HALL, Md. — The Southern Maryland Agriculture Commission wants to help boost your profits by making it easier for the public to buy farm products directly from you.

Working in cooperation with the Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA), the commission will produce a County Farm Directory for each of the following counties — Anne Arundel, Charles, Prince George's, and St. Mary's (Calvert County's Agricultural Commission has already produced a farm directory for their county).

Each county farm directory will include a listing of all farms in that county that want to be included. Every farm entry in the directory would include a list of products and/or services available for sale.

These directories will be distributed where potential customers are likely to see them, including county fairs, local tourism and economic development offices, public libraries, and county extension offices in the southern Maryland region.

There is no cost to be included in your county's farm directory. All you have to do is complete a simple survey form. Survey forms are currently being mailed out to more than 1,400 farm businesses.

If you would like to have your farm listed but did not receive a survey, if you have any questions about the survey or the farm directories, contact Valerie Gonlin, agribusiness development coordinator for the Maryland Department of Agriculture at (410) 841-5770.

BUSINESS ◆ NEWS

Lebanon Valley Enterprises Installs New Powder Coat Finishing System

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Lebanon Valley Enterprises announces the installation of a new powder coat finishing system in its facility located in Myerstown.

With this new system they can take the raw product to the final baked on powder coating. This coating produces a finish that is smooth for easy cleaning, resistant to chemicals, and durable for years of wear.

Lebanon Valley Enterprises (LVE) is a multifaceted company which provides light to heavy metal fabrication, precast concrete beams, pillars and other precast products for agricultural and other applications and powder coat finishing.

Formed in January 1996, the company executives and shareholders have 30 years of combined experienced in the manufacturing of agricultural confinement equipment. They have 10 years of experience in applying powder coat finishes to agricultural equipment along with a variety of other types of products. Earl Zimmerman, president, runs the company along with Greg Lentz, vice president of sales and manufacturing; Ken Leach, vice president of powder coating and precast; and Ike Lapp, vice president of engineering and product design.

Reclaiming The 19th Century Forest

ASPERS (Adams Co.) —Nestled in the rolling green hills of Central Pennsylvania is a 156-year-old grist mill community next to Opossum Creek. The intersection named Centre Mills serves as the operating base for Centre Mills Antique Woods, a 20-year-old business owned and operated by John R. Longanecker.

More than 20 years ago Longanecker tore down his first barn. He salvaged a 150-year-old barn and rescued the floor planks, hand-hewn beams, and barn siding.

It was at this time the roots of appreciation were conceived with regard to recognizing the beauty that results from America's wood being preserved by nature and at the same time still maintaining its potential for structural reuse. He also began to marvel at the mastery and ingenuity of the early American builder.

Longanecker projects that one of the trends for the 21st century will be the reuse of wood, not only from old structures for reuse, but also for providing the modern day consumer products of exceptional beauty as old wood species are redesigned as flooring, wall boards, and ceilings.

Longanecker still experiences the thrill of rescuing wood from old structures that have lost their apparent usefulness or that have been damaged by the effects of nature. He has salvaged wood from more than 80 buildings. Centre Mills Antique Woods has supplied unusual products for such unique movies as "Gettysburg" and "Joe's Apartment."

Centre Mills products include an unusual collection of different species: antique oak, Pennsylvania native yellow and white pine, American chestnut (a tree that no longer grows in North America), and antique western fir. Longanecker also rescues the remains of complete antique log cabins and maintains a large collection of hand-hewn barn beams.

Massey Ferguson Celebrates 150 Years Of Service

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson® is observing its 150th anniversary in 1997, an achievement never envisioned by Daniel Massey when he opened his small machine shop in 1847 and began manufacturing farm implements.

Today, Massey Ferguson is one of the biggest names in farm equipment. MF® products are sold in more than 140 countries and are produced in company plants and by associate and licensee operations in 18 countries of the world.

Massey Ferguson tractors are the world's best-selling brand and the company has achieved this leadership role in tractor sales for the past 34 consecutive years. 1997 promises to be its 35th record-setting year.

Massey began to expand into global markets in the 1860s when its harvesting equipment was awarded First Grand Prize in field trails at the International Exposition in Paris, France. As a result, the Massey company began receiving orders from export markets in Europe well in advance of other North American manufacturers.

In 1891, the Massey Mfg. Co. and A. Harris, Son & Co., the two most successful agricultural companies in Canada, merged to form Massey-Harris Company Limited, and pursued a vigorous growth policy. By 1908 at least 48 percent of the company's sales were in foreign markets.

Following the end of World War I a new era began as the tractor became recognized as a more economical form of power than the horse, and when used in conjunction with the reaper-thresher or combine reduced by half the cost of harvesting and threshing.

Massey-Harris contributed to his new era of agriculture with its first gasoline-powered tractor in 1917, and continued to design and produce a line of productive and efficient tractors. In the 1930s, Massey-Harris introduced a four-wheel drive tractor, a common sight on farms today, but ahead of its time in that era.

By the mid-1920, the market for Massey-Harris Reaper-Threshers and mowers in Europe had become so great that the company established factories in France and Germany to meet the increased demand.

In 1938 Massey-Harris introduced the world's first commercially available self-propelled combine harvester — the Self-Propelled No. 20. This new and revolutionary combine required only one man to operate it, freed a tractor for other work, opened the field without running down the crop, moved at speeds up to four miles an hour, and reaped, threshed and delivered a stream of grain from is elevated delivery spout in a single continous automatic operation.

The company followed this achivement with the No. 21 Self-Propelled Combine, a more efficient machine that proved its economy of operation during the Second World War when, to meet the need to feed the armed forces of the U.S. and Canada and their civilian populations, 500 Massey-Harris combines harvested crops from Texas through the heart of the Canadian prairies during the now-famous Harvest Brigade. These 500 self-propelled machines combined 1,019,500 acres, saved more than 300,000 man-hours and 500,000 gallons of fuel, and harvested more than 25,000,000 bushels of grain, vegetables, and other crops.

In 1945, to meet the growing demand for its products outside North America, the company began production at a factory in Manchester, England.

Massey-Harris and Harry Ferguson Limited of Coventry, England, merged in 1953 to become Massey-Harris-Ferguson Limited. The company named was shorted to Massey Ferguson in 1958. This merger gave Massey-Harris access to the revolutionary Ferguson System of tractor weight transfer with ground-engaging implements, making it possible for small, lightweight tractors to achieve the performance of machines twice their size.

Today, the majority of all tractors made in the world utilize this principle of weight transfer for increased power and traction, and the Coventry plant is the world's largest facility devoted solely to the production of tractors. More than three million tractors have been manufactured there since 1946.

In the 1980s, Massey Ferguson pioneered tractor electronics, introducting its exclusive electronic linkage control for more precise and smoother control of 3-point mounted and semi-mounted implements.

AGCO Corporation, which became Massey Ferguson's parent company in 1994, is now preparing to introduce the Fieldstar advanced precision farming system in North America, based on MF's pioneering research and development in Europe.

The Fieldstar system will record yield information in the combine cab, produce yield and field application maps in the farm office, and control tractor-mounted implements for cultivation, seeding and fertilizer applications. Farmers using the Fieldstar system can match crop inputs to yield to improve profitability and reduce waste. The Fieldstar system is being tested on Gleaner® and Massey Ferguson combines in North America.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Hunters, collectors, shooters, outdoorsmen, and Americana buffs will be heading for the 38th annual Gun Show, sponsored by the Lancaster Muzzle Loading Rifle Association.

The show will be held at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center, Lancaster, on Saturday, March 8 and Sunday, March 9.

Triple-H Announces Employment

Dan Rice

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Glenn Horst, president of Triple H Construction, announced the recent employment of Dan Rice as vice president of ag sales.

Born and raised on a Berks County dairy farm, Rice was previously a self-employed dairy farmer.

A graduate of Cobleskill State University of New York with a degree in agricultural economics, Rice resides near Fivepointville.

Triple H Construction's Ag Division is a design/build general construction company serving the farmer's needs throughout Pennsylvania and neighboring states.

In his new position, Rice will help dairy farmers design labor efficient facilities and assist with financial arrangements.

Kuhn Introduces Gyrorake

VERNON, N.Y. — A new model Gyrorake, the GA 4101 GTH, has been added to the current Gyrorake line from Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., Vernon, N.Y. USA, and Kuhn S.A., Saverne, France.

The new GA 4101 GTH is an improved version of Kuhn's GA 4101 GT model. The new rake has two new improvements: hydraulic lift and leveling, and optional bogie axles.

The hydraulic lift has a unique feature which raises the rake from the front and rear. This provides the necessary clearance to allow the rake to remain in operation when raised so that windrows will be undisturbed when passing over them.

The optional bogie axles with "hyperballoon" tires provide smoother operation and improve the rakes' ability to follow changes in ground contour. This means more hay and less dirt in the windrow.

The rotary raking design leaves a superbly formed windrow. Windrows are fluffy and uniform with no roping for decreased drying times and more uniform, smooth pickup. The rotary concept allows faster, gentler, cleaner operation with minimum leaf damage at all speeds. This Gyrorake will also operate as a windrow inverter.

A new model Gyrorake, the GA 4101 GTH, has been added to the current Gyrorake line from Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., Vernon, N.Y. USA, and Kuhn S.A., Saverne, France.

Kuhn offers nine rake models with widths from 10 feet to 24 feet, both mounted and trailed.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM CLOSE BY

The Eastern Cattleman's Symposium at State College has been an annual event for a number of years as part of the Pennsylvania Beef Expo program.

This year the Symposium will be held in three locations around the state: Adamstown in Lancaster County, Selinsgrove in Snyder County, and at State College. The dates and locations are March 25 in Adamstown at Weaver's Market at the intersection of Rt. 897 and Rt. 272, March 26 just north of Selinsgrove at Mill Road and Rt. 11-15, and March 27 in State College at the Toftrees Resort Hotel just off the Rt. 322 bypass at the Toftrees exit.

We are proud to have Pfizer Animal Health as a sponsor of the event again this year as part of their Cattleman's College program. Their support has enabled us to provide a great program.

Featured speakers this year will include Dr. Chuck Lambert, Dr. Lee Myer, Henry Bergfeld, and Dr. Ken Odde.

Dr. Lambert is the chief economist with the National Cattlemen's Beef Association in the Washington, D.C. office. Cattle markets have recently experienced some tremendous changes, and Chuck will discuss the forces that made this happen as well as how these forces will influence the beef market in the future. Dr. Lambert will be on the program on March 25 and March 26.

On March 27 we are pleased to have Dr. Lee Myer join us from the University of Kentucky. Lee will discuss market outlook with the State College audience as well as bring us some perspective for the cow-calf sector for the future.

Henry Bergfeld is manager of Summitcrest Angus Farm in Summitville, Ohio. For the past several years, Henry has directed a breeding program at Summitcrest with the objective of consumer satisfaction for beef. In the age of the "consumer-driven" beef industry, these efforts will provide a guide to much of the future in breeding beef cattle. Henry will be with us on March 27 in State College.

Dr. Ken Odde is from Pollock, S.D. and is a consulting veterinarian with Pfizer Animal Health. He was instrumental in setting up Pfizer's "Electronic Cattle Drive" that allows prevaccinated and preconditioned feeder cattle to be offered for sale on a national data transmission system. Dr. Odde will be discussing the value of the precondtioned calf to the industry at all three locations.

Other topics to be discussed include using feed resources more effectively, calving management, handling facilities that work, and management of replacement heifers. The cost of meeting is $20 for each location if registered by March 20 and the cost is $25 at the door. The fee includes a buffet lunch and a copy of the proceedings for all of the sessions.

You may register or get further information by contacting the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association at (814) 692-4208.

Get The Calves Castrated

Anyone who has heard me give a presentation about basic herd management around the state has heard my challenge to take all of the rubber bands and the banders and throw them away.

The practice of banding calves (or not castrating male calves at all) is one of the most costly mistakes that can be made in a cow-calf operation. We have well documented that rubber bands fail 8-10 percent of the time. This is very costly to the feeder who has to spend $100 or more to fix the problem, or simply takes the loss by selling the animal. A real concern I have is for the welfare of the animal that has been banded.

We can do a better job of castration that will result in 100 percent effectiveness and be more tolerant of the animal. That practice is castration with a knife as soon after birth as possible. Cut off the bottom two-thirds of the scrotum, pull the testicles completely out, and clip any remaining tissue is how it is done, and this will take less than half the time of trying to band one correctly. The calf will be at full speed by the next day.

I calculated the value of spending one minute to castrate a calf with a knife by comparing the value of feeder calves sold as bulls and those sold as steers in a cooperative feeder calf sale. The result was the time spent castrating the calf was worth about $3,000 per hour! Will you work for $3,000 per hour?

Tractor Safety Program Set

ERIE (Erie Co.) — According to the Fair Labor Standards Act, minors under the age of 16 may work outside of school hours in farm jobs not declared particularly hazardous. An exception is made for youth 14 and 15 years old who may drive a tractor on a farm that is not owned by their parents provided they successfully complete the necessary tractor safety program.

This safety program allows them to drive a tractor over 20 PTO horsepower and to connect and disconnect farm implements from these tractors. It does not permit them to operate or assist with the operation of any PTO-driven implements or other self-propelled machines.

This year, Crawford and Erie County Cooperative Extension Offices will provide the safety training needed to allow youth 14 and 15 years old to drive a tractor on a farm other than that of their parents. Other youth over 13 years of age who wish to learn more about tractor safety are encouraged to participate, but will not take the test on Saturday.

Sessions will be held at Valley Tire, on Route 19 just south of Waterford. Classroom instruction will be on Wednesday evening, March 5, from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and on Thursday evening, March 6, from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. A testing session is scheduled for Saturday morning, March 8, from 9 a.m. to noon. A charge of $5 per participant will be due at the first session on March 5. Please phone in your reservation by March 4 to the Erie County Extension Office at (814) 825-0900.

The emphasis of this program is the safe use of farm equipment. It is not intended to teach youth how to drive a tractor. However, those youth participating will need to demonstrate their ability to drive a tractor in the testing session on Saturday, March 8.

March Conference Focuses On New, Traditional Equine Therapies

BETHLEHEM (Northampton Co.) — Would you like to know more about respiratory problems such as heaves, chronic coughs and allergies that limit the performance of your horse?

Do you know how large a threat Equine Protozoal Myeloencephalitis is to your horse and how to recognize the early symptoms of the disease?

Have you wondered if all the advertised supplements really work for the arthritic or heavily stressed performance horse?

Would you like to know more about the realities of alternative therapies?

Could acupuncture and chiropractics benefit your horse?

If you own, ride, or train horses, and would like to know the answers to these questions and others, be sure to attend the very exciting conference, New and Traditional Equine Therapies, which is being held on March 14 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, Bethlehem. The conference, which is sponsored by cooperative extension of Penn State and Rutgers universities, will provide very valuable information on the treatment of a variety of unsoundnesses that can inhibit equine performance.

Six well-noted veterinarians will present information on chronic coughs and allergies, alternative therapies, acupuncture, chiropractics, treating common joint, muscle and tendon injuries, and recognizing and treating Equine Protozoal Myeloencephalitis (EPM).

For more information and a registration form, contact Donna Foulk at the Monroe County Extension Office, (717) 421-6430; Everett Chamberlain at the Warren County Extension Office, (980) 475-6503; or Nancy Kadwill at the Montgomery County Extension Office, (610) 489-4315.

National Farmers Union Applauds Responsiveness To Dairy Producers

DENVER, Colo. — National Farmers Union (NFU) applauds Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman's announcement Tuesday of a four-point plan aimed at bolstering milk prices as "a good start," but stated that it is crucial that additional steps be taken adminstratively and legislatively to address the dramatic decline in milk prices at the bulk tank. Producer prices for milk have dropped nearly $4 per hundredweight over the past four months.

"All of the actions announced by the secretary were presented to him by Farmers Union leaders just prior to the holidays," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "NFU is very pleased with USDA's responsiveness and recognition of the economic crisis facing independent producers across the country."

NFU will continue to push for further administrative and legislative measures to enhance and stabilize milk prices over the long term. "Farmers Union will continue to push the Clinton adminstration to issue an executive order establishing oversight of the National Cheese Exchange (NCE) by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) or the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and to include a federal rule prohibiting 'trading against interest' within NCE activities," said Swenson.

NFU will continue to request that USDA eliminate or substantially reduce the influence of the NCE in the establishment of the basic formula price.

"In addition, it is important that Congress be requested to urge the secretary to establish a minimum floor under the basic formular price," said Swenson. "Stabilization of milk prices is good for producers and consumers alike. Although falling milk prices seem to indicate otherwise, we are not in a surplus position of milk or dairy products. Government stocks of butter or cheese are nonexistent."

Secretary Glickman pledged to:

•Purchase $5 million worth of cheese for domestic feeding programs, along with accelerating school lunch purchases already under way.

•Increase the level of dairy products in international food assistance programs.

•Reactivate the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP) for butterfat and increase DEIP sales for non-fat dry milk.

•Begin collecting price data for cheddar cheese sales at manufacturing plants as a way of addressing concerns about the accuracy of reported prices.

Conservation Leadership School Offers Unique Opportunities

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Instead of desks and blackboards, the classrooms at Penn State's Conservation Leadership School this summer will include an underground cave, canoes, and sailboats on a 72-acre lake and green leaves and shade on 700 acres of forested land.

In this unique setting at the University's Stone Valley Recreation Area near State College, Pa., secondary students between the ages of 15 and 18 will learn about conservation during two-week programs that emphasize field-based, hands-on learning, group problem solving and environmental management planning.

The curriculum involves active participation in environmental management, resource assessment, and regenerative conservation methods. Topics include watershed management, citizen action, basic ecology, land-use planning, alternative energy supplies, environmental risk assessment and forest management.

Students provide their own transportation to the Stone Valley Recreation Area, where they will stay in four-person platform tents with cots, heated shower and restroom facilities, complete meal service and all educational needs.

The $440 tuition ($495 for non-Pennsylvania residents) covers tuition and all other costs for the student's two-week stay.

The 1997 Conservation Leadership School dates are: Session I, June 29-July 12; Session II, July 13-26; and Advanced Session, August 13-26. Please note: The Advanced Session is open only to students who previously attended a regular session.

To register by phone or for more information, call 1-800-PSU-TODAY (1-800-778-8632), or visit http://www.cde.psu.edu/C&I/ConservationLS.html to see the WWW page.

Agriculture Needs Good Highways

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Agriculture is successful in Pennsylvania because of "our great interstate system," according to Guy F. Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB). The farm spokesman made the comments recently at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel at a Pennsylvania Highway Information Association (PHIA) meeting.

"During the past 40 years," Donaldson said, "our great interstate system has enabled Pennsylvania farmers to turn their small family farms into successful agribusinesses by allowing them to reach markets outside their own communities."

He stressed this point by saying farmers have access to nearly 40 percent of the nation's population because of the good highway system in the Keystone State.

"Farmers need good roads to produce and sell products," he said. "Without a healthy interstate system, farmers incur substantial costs in production items, and substantial losses in selling their produce."

Donaldson said that "roads and bridges must be in good repair, if agriculture is to be successful. A modern highway system is critical to our state's well-being."

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a voluntary farm organization which represents the voice of 26,625 families in 54 county Farm Bureaus. It is affiliated with the 4.7-million-member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Ag Engineering Conference March 10

MERCER (Mercer Co.) An Ag Engineering Conference is scheduled March 10 here at the Mercer County Cooperative Extension. The program will be repeated March 11 at the Northwestern Rural Electric Association Building in Cambridge Springs. This program will address engineering topics related to dairy and animal production and run from 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

Topics will include manure storage and handling, sand bedding, deregulation of electric generation, feeding system design, and heat stress. Speakers include Richard Stowell, Food Agricultural and Biological Engineering, Ohio State University; Robert Graves and Dennis Buffington, Agricultural and Biological Engineering, Penn State University; and John Tyson, Agricultural Engineering, Erie County Cooperative Extension.

Cost of the conference is $10 for lunch and registrations must be received by Thursday, March 6. For additional information or registration information, contact John Tyson at the Erie County Cooperative Extension Office at (814) 825-0900.

"NEW" CAUSE OF DIARRHEA/WET PITS IN PENNSYLVANIA COMMERCIAL LAYER FLOCKS

Dr. Patty Dunn
Dept. of Vet. Science

Several commercial egg layer submissions involving complaints of wet pits, wet droppings (diarrhea), and/or increased eggshell staining have been presented to avian veterinarians at the Penn State University Animal Diagnostic Laboratory during the last two years.

Most of these cases do not involve significant loss of egg production, sickness or mortality, but do result in hardships related to pit management, manure handling and downgraded stained eggs.

Heavy fly infestations and heavy bacterial contamination (E. coli, Salmonella sp.) are also more likely in wet environments. Investigations of these cases are complex because a variety of different factors can be involved in creating these "symptoms." Some of these factors are disease related, and some are not. Factors to be considered include the operation of the pit, types and arrangements of cages and waterers, ration, genetic strain of bird and past or current urinary tract or gastrointestinal tract disease.

To sort out which factors are most likely involved, it should first be determined if a true "diarrhea" or "diuresis" condition exists (that is, droppings are abnormally wet as they are excreted from the bird), or if the fresh droppings are normal in consistency, but take on environmental water in the dropping guard or pit areas. Birds should be observed in the process of defecation, and fresh droppings on drop curtains or boards should be examined. If the fresh droppings are indeed "runny," it may be possible to determine if the urate portion or the fecal portion contributes more to the moist consistency. Clear, watery high volume urates (diuresis) would most likely be linked to a kidney problem or excessive water intake, while soupy discolored feces (diarrhea) point to a gastrointestinal tract insult. To follow is a more detailed look at each of the suspect factors that can contribute to the problem of wet pits/wet droppings, and stained shells.

House Factors

Physical factors in the design, placement and function of the house and equipment can result in excessive moisture in the manure pit. Excess water can be absorbed into the manure piles making them soggy and "soupy" in consistency.

Instead of the droppings piling or "coning" in relatively dry hills under the cage rows, the manure levels off and settles across the rows. In these cases, house orientation, pit design, ground water runoff, wall leakage and pit ventilation should be checked.

In periods of high rainfall, such as occurred in Pennsylvania in 1996, ground water accumulation can be more of a problem than anticipated. Water from equipment, commonly originating from leaking waterers or water lines, can add appreciable amounts of moisture to the pit. Arrangement of cages and dropping guards (curtains or scraping boards) impacts on how the excreted manure enters the pit and how much drying of the dropping occurs.

In the specific case of increased stained eggs, slope of cage floors and possible obstructions between the cage floor and egg belt should be evaluated. The type and placement of waterers (nipples, cups) impact on the amount of water leaked or splashed out and wasted. Ventilation intakes and fans must be set to optimize air quality and prevent excessive moisture build up in the house.

Proper temperature control including adequate house insulation also factors into decreasing the formation of condensation on surfaces within the house.

Feed And Water Factors

Feed formulation should always be checked carefully as certain ingredients may cause "osmotic" diarrhea. Excessive salt in the ration is a common cause of osmotic diarrhea and increased water intake. Certain types of bakery by-products may be hidden sources of excess salt.

Salt levels in the water should also be checked. Water meters should be monitored to determine if intake is normal for the given environmental temperature and humidity, always taking into account that it is important for birds to drink more in order to avoid overheating in hot, humid conditions.

Certain mycotoxins that may be contaminating feed can cause wet droppings. Ochratoxin, oosporein, and citrinin are documented examples of this phenomenon. Ochratoxin's main effect is damage to the kidneys. Urate consistency is altered and wet, sticky urates can result in increased eggshell stains. Oosporein also damages kidneys, and end-stage renal disease may result.

Birds often develop gout and urate consistency may change. Citrinin's primary effect is a marked increase in water consumption by the birds which almost immediately results in very watery droppings.

Genetic Factors

Some strains of chickens have a tendency toward wetter droppings than others. Some naturally have a softer fecal portion, while others have more watery urates.

The ability to concentrate uric acid and reabsorb water from the intestinal/cecal content can vary considerably. Some strains of birds tend to drink more than others, and the extra water intake flushes through the kidneys and results in watery droppings.

Behaviorally, some birds tend to "play" with or splash in waterers, causing more spillage than would occur with less aggressive drinkers or more passive birds.

Disease Factors

Finally, urinary tract or gastrointestinal tract disease can alter the final consistency of the dropping. Commercial layers experience many insults to their renal system, which can cause kidney damage. Particularly, the condition called "urolithiasis" (urate stone formation), is a relatively common ailment.

Causes of kidney damage/urolithiasis are high relative calcium in the pre-lay ration, alkaline ration, water deprivation and previous infection by nephrotropic strains of infectious bronchitis virus. Genetic strain of bird has also been implicated in the predisposition to develop urolithiasis. As previously noted, certain mycotoxins can also cause end-stage renal disease. In many flocks with significant kidney disease, egg production drops and increased mortality eclipse any complaints of changes in dropping consistency, but these problems may be concurrent.

Enteritis, which is defined in general terms as any inflammation in part or all of the intestinal tract, can result in diarrhea. Enteric bacteria, viruses, and parasites can cause different forms of enteritis. Bacteria such as E. coli and Salmonella sp. likely cause enteritis in chickens, but these conditions are not as well defined as they are in mammals such as cattle and swine. Certain anaerobic bacteria, particularly Clostridium Sp., can overgrow in the intestine and cause ulcerative or necrotic enteritis.

Many enteric viruses including reovirus, rotavirus, etc. can cause intestinal pathology particularly in young birds. Protozoal parasites such as coccidia and cryptosporidia and helminth parasites including roundworms and tapeworms also contribute to GI tract dysfunction. All of these pathogens may contribute to wet feces, although most are considered uncommon problems in adult caged layers. Biogenic amines, mycotoxins or other irritating compounds in feed also cause enteric disease that can result in diarrhea. Again, these causes are relatively uncommon.

A condition called "cecal spirochetosis" has been diagnosed recently at the Penn State University Animal Diagnostic Laboratory in chickens from several layer flocks presenting dirty vents, diarrhea and/or increased staining of eggshells. In this condition, heavy numbers of spirochete-type bacteria (motile, spiral-shaped flexible rods) appear to be colonizing the mucosal surface and crypts of the cecal lining. Some of these bacteria appear to be invading the deeper tissues of the cecae, and mild to moderate inflammation is present.

With unaided vision, the cecae often do not appear abnormal, although the cecal content of some birds may be watery or foamy. Because a major function of the cecae is reabsorption of water from the intestinal tract contents, any pathology in this specialized portion of the lower tract can result in watery feces.

The diagnosis of this condition is made by microscopic examination of specially stained cecal lining smears and fixed cecal tissue. Special bacteriologic cultures of the cecae are also taken to grow the spirochete on artificial media. Culture of the organism is slow (5-6 days) and the organism is difficult to sub-culture.

At Penn State, further characterization of the spirochete by biochemical and electron microscopy techniques is under way. To date, the bacterium has not been speciated, but many of its characteristics are similar to bacteria in the genus Serpulina.

One species in this genus — Serpulina hyodysenteria — is the causative agent of swine dysentery, a diarrheic disease of pigs. Although normal cecal flora of chickens likely includes one or more species of spirochete bacteria, it appears that the specific overgrowing spirochete associated with cecal spirochetosis can be a pathogen in certain instances.

In recent years, published case reports originating from Iowa and Ohio have described cecal spirochetes associated with diarrhea/dirty eggshells in layers. Previously, reports of similar spirochete-associated conditions had appeared in the European literature. Laboratory testing in Iowa has shown that cecal spirochete isolates from chickens and rheas are consistently sensitive to several antibacterial drugs including carbadox, lincomycin, tiamulin, and bacitracin. Of these drugs, only bacitracin (low level) is approved for use in commercial egg layers. It is uncertain if the allowable level would be effective against layer cecal spirochetosis.

Antibacterial therapy followed by probiotics/normal gut flora competitive exclusion products would be a treatment regimen worthy of testing.

Many questions remain about the source, mode of transmission and spread of the bacteria, its role as a pathogen or co-pathogen, and effective treatment and control of the condition in layer chickens. More investigations into flocks with symptoms of diarrhea are necessary to determine the incidence of the condition.

Either cecal spirochetosis is a fairly uncommon condition, or it is present with significant frequency but rarely diagnosed in routine diagnostic work-ups. Cecal spirochetosis should be considered as a differential diagnosis in cases of diarrhea and eggshell staining in layers.

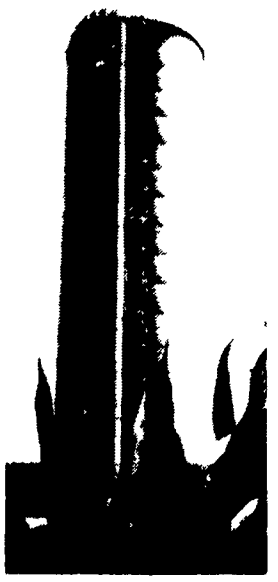
THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!



"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Protect your valuable feeds from the elements... increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

ADVANTAGE ... CONCRETE

AUCTION or BROKERAGE CALL FOR THE ADVANTAGES OF EACH. WITH 26 YEARS OF EXPERTISE AS A CAI AUCTIONEER & REALTOR I CAN HELP YOU MAKE THE PROPER DECISION A VISIT TO EXPLAIN WILL COST YOU NOTHING.

ATTENTION: BUYERS & SELLERS

Please take a moment to read this important announcement.

To YOU SELLERS: I am now videoing your farm for better exposure to the buyers. This means your farm will be shown to prospective buyers right in their living room, my office or my MOBILE office. I'm spending from 30 minutes to 1 hour per farm so your farm has the best exposure possible. If your farm is listed in the winter months but not sold till fall etc. I will be doing an add on video of your crops in summer months for the buyers to see your crops if they've been harvested. This is the most modern technology available to you today. If you want to be a seller through this method call Sanford G. Leaman, Realtor today @ 1-800-836-8113 SOLD is what I strive for.

To YOU BUYERS: If you want to see the farm you are interested in before spending a day or as some buyers have told me - they looked for literally months and some as many as 10 years looking at farms that were not properly represented and wasted time that could have been better used in this busy fast pace world. Think of all the money spent plus wear & tear on your vehicle. This is no longer the way to buy a farm or mountain property. Call Sanford Leaman today and have the video shown to you in my office or MOBILE office, or the video can be sent to you if you have a VCR. Call Sandy @ 1-800-836-8113 and become efficient as I'm doing with the farms I have listed for sale.

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

PROTEUS™

"...Never Had Production Like This Before."

Nestled in the Cumberland Valley midway between Chambersburg and Waynesboro in Franklin County, the Mark Gayman family farm 400 acres to produce the grain and forages for their high producing herd. under the prefix of Gaymere, these 188 Registered Holsteins post a 21,539 lb. rolling herd average. On the latest weigh in, the 162 cows that were in milk averaged 80.4 pounds per day. The most recent String Performance Analysis lists 28 cows milking more than 100 lbs., two of which are at 167.5 lbs. and 161.1 lbs.

"We have never had production like this before," Mark said. "The highest daily average before was only 65 lbs. I don't think our forages are anything great because it was hard to harvest the crops this summer.

The Gaymere registered Holsteins are fed a TMR mix that is based on Purina's new Proteus feed.

Mark Gayman keeps good records to help determine dairy herd profitability

28 COWS MILKING MORE THAN 100 LBS.

So, you got to give credit to Purina's new Proteus feed."

The Gaymere herd was part of the on-farm trials for Proteus in 1995. At the time it was estimated milk production would increase by five pounds per cow per day. And Mark saw an immediate increase in production.

"I was so pleased with what I saw in the trials, that I couldn't wait until they began commercial production of Proteus."

Now the herd has been on Proteus nearly a full year. And the cows now freshening on the program are really proving the claims of increased production. In addition, Proteus is designed to decrease the nitrogen that is passed through the cow. So, the new feed has captured the notice of those who look for a more safe environment.

The Gaymans have been feeding Purina for more than 35 years and they recommend the company and products to everyone. "For us, it's a matter of trust. We trust Purina, and we trust their people.
